up until they reached $700, when a young man named McWilliams became the owner of the first wheel ever seen in the Kiondike.

Melancholy Give-Away on an Autumn Touring Trip. Amelia's chestnut bang was an admired property of the coming fashions.

When the party started to ride to a neighboring village one day, relates the New York Sun, Amelia's bang had never looked more charming.

At a turn in the road Amelia's progress became slow and erratic. She was at the rear of the line. For a while the riders wheeled along in silence.
