THINGS FOR WINTER WEAR.

Pre-Eminence of the Melon Muffs, Silks, Ribbons and Gloves. NEW YORK, Oct. 13.—The glories of the winter of 1897 and the glories of 1898 promise to be absolutely outrivalled by the true magnificence of the season just closing... A decidedly nose reddening breeze whipped out of the north a few days ago and then the fun is begun.

with ribbons into as small orifices as comfort will allow. A small outstanding fringe can be left at both ends and trimmed with fur tails, but the muff when completed should have two distinct compartments for the hands... New Surtouts. Women to whom money no object are undoubtedly lending themselves to the fascinations of the very long fur coat that buttons up double-breastedly in front and has long, solemn cutaway tails, but she who is wise as well as a lover of beauty will scarcely invest any capital in the new surtouts, as they are called, for their days of popularity will be exceedingly short.

sized muff is considered effective and perfectly efficient for treating, therefore there is no reason to assert that small caps, shoulder pieces with stole fronts, or in fact any of the good orthodox cuts of fur have lost one whit of their popularity... Smart but Chilly. All the new capes, of course, are shawls, and their sloped fronts treated very often with a graduated arrangement of tails, but for warmth these new garments are a snare and a delusion.

Illustrations of Fashions. Little Bo Peep, if her flocks were made up of the handsome fur-bearing animals, would shed bitter tears over the slaughter in tails that is going on this autumn as shown by the sketch, which is drawn from the newest fur models. One of the figures in the group shows a muff made of Alaska sable tails, a simple thing, but cruelly dand and worn with it a stock of orange velvet... Silks and Satins. Gowns, however, that will be worthy of preservation for appreciation posterity are those made this season of the new evening silks and satins. In the days of Louis XV such imperially beautiful fabrics were not dreamed of as Cotele d'or, satin satane and taffeta croquette.

For the next ten days we were the only women nurses in the camp, and as all the men felt more comfortable when there was a woman about, we did what we could for the whole 600. It was during these first days of rushing around that we found ourselves nicknamed "The sunshine of the camp." Some of the Michigan volunteers were gallant enough to originate that title.

back of the camp where guards were few. There we found a young volunteer doctor, with more cleverness than respect for authorities, and he took us into the camp and set us to work. The very best of the men nurses were two Armenians. One had been the son of a minister of the Armenian church, and had seen his father, mother and sisters killed by the Turks. He told it one day, very quietly, but with a look in his eyes which made me think that stray and unprotected Turks had best avoid him.

When the war broke out this chef wanted to do something for the soldiers, and so volunteered to one of the relief associations, which sent him to our hospital. They paid him about what his board cost, so he practically gave his services, and that meant a great deal. Finally, about the end of August, my sister and I said goodbye to our men and Over in Russia the fair empress has given the ukase on muffs for it is said that the only fad of that gentle, melancholy woman is for furs. Just now she prefers a melon-shaped muff with street dresses and a good big fellow at that. The muff is made of ten pieces of fur, so braided that they stiff up at the broadest point, leaving the center of the hand warmer some twenty-five inches in circumference, while the orifices at either end are very small. With smart calling tolets she adopts a small muff made wholly of polar fox, sable, or ermine tails, and the few that have been imported are worth from $500 to $1,000. There simply is no question as to their beauty, but the price is so exclusive that many women are going to content their guilty covetous souls with ostrich and marabout feather hand protectors.

How the rich chined and embossed silks and satins are made up in reception and tea gowns is elucidated in the two single cuts of figures. The larger model is that of a costume wrought out from killed crepe lisse and moire decorated in floral patterns. The lisse front of skirt and body is white, made over pale yellow silk. The moire train and body are white, also elaborated in corn flower and clematis pattern, while the shaped ruffles down the front of the skirt and the little Roman cape and cross pieces are of cornflower blue satin.

FURS AND HIGH COLLARS. Having sable points and cravat ends. A charming coronet hat is the finishing touch. Another model shows the treatment of a small black velvet cape with mink tails and the muff that accompanies the cape is a melon-shaped comforter of alternating dark and lighter stripes of mink. A reticule muff in two compartments appears with the third figure, which illustrates the uses of the bow bow, while the fourth fashion plate displays a coat of broad tail, or Astrakan, or Persian lamb, trimmed and recut in harmony with the new laws.

Imperial Hair Regenerator. No matter what color or condition of your HAIR—GRAY, BLEACHED or GREY—it can be made beautiful, glossy and natural by one application of the IMPERIAL HAIR REGENERATOR. It is clean, odorless, lasting, does no harm, and is a big fellow of densely brown or gray cub wolf fur, while Persian lamb, mink and Alaska sable in reticule or melon shape are to be as extensively used as ever.

Two-button cutaway coats, made with a silk-lined notched collar, like those on men's coats, are neat and inexpensive styles for everyday wear. The fronts slope very much towards the hips, the curve beginning immediately below the buttons. In choosing the dress waist or silk shirt waist fitted dress, the back is adjusted by closely fitted side forms. The coat sleeves have no extra fullness at the top, and are only of sufficient size to slip on and off with ease. The pocket
