Details of the Shooting. Belick went to a side door, commanding a view of the kitchen entrance, and looked out. Sargent was standing at the latter door and when he saw Belick he said to have put his hand upon his hip pocket and threatened the bricklayer's life. Belick ordered him away and when there was no disposition to obey he was sent to the street, returning with revolver, he fired and followed it up until the chambers were exhausted. Sargent, who, it afterward developed, was only armed with a long hunter's knife, turned at the first shot and ran toward the rear gate, outside of which was standing a barefooted wagon. Belick pursued him and fired his last shot as Sargent started to climb on board. The stricken man wavered and fell with his foot on the hub of the wheel. He died almost instantly, with wounds in his head and back.

Officer Gibbons was attracted by the shots and arrested Belick, who made no resistance. A hurt man was sent to the street and a squad of officers, including Captain Haze and Chief White, hurried to the scene. The coroner was notified and removed the body to the morgue. W. H. Keene, driver of the express wagon, had a narrow escape from the fusillade of mortar fire when he was sent to the street by Sargent to "go and get a trunk." When he
