EXPOSITION AS AN EDUCATOR

Eyes of the People Are Opened by the Wonderful Display.

MUCH INSTRUCTION AND PROFIT IS GAINED

Dean Fair Talks on the Question of Education and Culture and Shows the Advantages Omaha Citizens Have Recently Enjoyed.

Education and culture from two points of view, the home and the community, were elaborated upon by Dean Campbell Fair at Trinity cathedral yesterday. In the morning he spoke more particularly of the need and benefit of the education of a religious home life upon the children and in the evening his subject was the educational effect upon the community of the Trans-Mississippi Exposition in particular and the liberalizing, civilizing influence upon the whole world of expositions in general. His morning text was from Psalm cxlvii, 12: "That our sons may be as plants grown up in their youth; that our daughters may be as corner stones, polished after the similitude of a palace." David, he said, in singing his song of triumph, selected one great cause of the prosperity of a people—the education and character of their children. A pretty word picture of the mother of the Gracchi bringing her children as her "jewels" to the extravagant court of opulent Rome served to illustrate one application of the morning text.

In the evening the subject was carried out still further in the lesson drawn from the exposition and its influence. The dean had many words of praise for the exposition management for their pluck and energy. During his discourse he said:

It is one of the marvels of the age that a comparatively modern city with the many disadvantages that western enterprise and progress have had to encounter should have succeeded in coming to the front with the accomplishment of an exposition of such magnitude and several lessons can be drawn by us from this achievement. The first of these lessons is that success will always attend pluck, determination and broad minded effort. The second is the power of mind over matter. Here a band of men conceived grandly and accomplished wonderfully. Some might have been satisfied with a merely local effort, but the projectors branched out into a field that included the whole world, and the fruition of their endeavor has been to gather the products of modern civilization from all quarters of the globe. But one of the most important results of the exposition has been education—education of a practical and very beneficial nature, since it not only instructs but liberalizes. Our people have seen things they never saw before and have learned much. In this respect it has been a great school. As a model of symmetry and grace the laying out of the beautiful buildings and grounds did its part to teach beauty; then the gathering here of the fruits of the earth and the achievements of human effort and skill instructed us in the wisdom of labor and taught us an optimism based upon industry. Finally we have learned to recognize that ability of others besides ourselves—we have seen what other states and nations can do—and this has broadened our ideas and given us a favorable opinion of our neighbors, so essential in this day of rapid social development.

The business benefits of the exposition were briefly considered in conclusion. Dean Fair thought the effects on the trade of this city and state would prove far-reaching and enduring.

The musical feature of the cathedral services was especially good. Miss Gertrude Kountze sang "Lead Kindly Light" at the morning service, accompanied by J. E. Butler at the organ, and a violin obligato by Robert Cusack. The organ recital given during the afternoon by Mr. Butler, assisted by Mrs. Howard Bruner, Miss Hazel Schneider and Leo G. Kratz, was well attended.

EVANGELIZING AMONG CHILDREN.

Rev. E. Payson Hammond Argues for Their Early Conversion.

When Jesus Christ said: "Suffer little children to come unto Me and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven." He meant considerably more than the interpretation that is usually put upon the injunction of the followers of the Savior. This is the declaration of Rev. E. Payson Hammond, the well known evangelist, among children. Rev. Hammond preaches that this injunction of Christ is not a truism consisting mainly of words but a command of vital force.

Rev. Hammond has spent many years of his life in evangelical work and has traveled far and wide in evangelic work among children. He is the Moody of the little ones, although he has been engaged much longer in his labor than Moody has among the grown folk, even though he may perhaps not be so widely known. He is at present conducting a series of meetings for children in Minneapolis and upon invitation yesterday visited the Westminster Presbyterian church. In the morning he occupied the pulpit of that church. He preached to a large congregation upon the conversion of children.

The evangelist declared that not only is it possible for little children to be converted but that it is a duty incumbent upon all Sunday school teachers to bring them to Christ. He said that the history of the church in all ages teaches that children can be saved. Mention is frequently made of child martyrs and testimony of grown people who have suffered for the faith in Christ is that their Christianity has existed from their childhood days. The preacher also asserted that he himself has seen innumerable cases of sincere conversion of children and has seen many men and women whose conversion dated from the days of their childhood. Every Christian has known of similar instances, but the fact that children may be converted does not in the majority of cases come home to them. That is they hear of some evangelist at a distance converting children but do not seem to think it possible for the children in their own Sunday schools and congregations being led into the right path.

make another a Christian better than he is himself. Yesterday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock a union meeting of children was held in the church. The attendance was very large.

MISSION BEGINS AT ST. PETER'S

Rev. Father Magavey Opens a Series of Sermons on Christianity.

Rev. L. Hugh Magavey of Fayetteville, Ark., preached an eloquent and patriotic sermon at St. Peter's church yesterday morning, taking for his text, "Render to Caesar the Things That Are Caesar's and to God the Things That Are God's." He said there was a divine authority and a human authority, but all power came from God. It was just to give to each its proper due, but the higher source of all authority is God. Human authority was that conferred by the laws of man and they should be obeyed, and the people strive to be patriotic, peaceable and honorable citizens, not forgetting that there are services to be rendered to God, such as living an upright Christian life, honest in thought, clean in character, prayerful and devout.

The sermon was an introductory to a mission meeting at St. Peter's which will begin Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock and continue each morning at the same hour until Saturday, and Wednesday evening 7:30 and each evening thereafter in the church. He said the intention had been to begin the mission Monday morning, but this was abandoned out of deference to Omaha day at the exposition. Father Magavey will give lectures at each of these services, which will parake of instruction to members of the church, as well as to non-members who may be interested in knowing something of the work of the church. The public is invited to attend all of these lectures and a cordial welcome will be given those not affiliated with the church.

Father Magavey is pronounced one of the most pleasing orators in the church. He was professor of rhetoric in the Georgetown university several years ago and has been connected with several other schools, being now a teacher in a university in Arkansas, where he was sent in hopes that his superior ability might strengthen the school in that part of the country. He is not only an orator but a scholar and his courses are full of interest and entertainment. He will close the mission by two sermons next Sunday, one in the morning and one in the evening.

CHURCH AND THE LABOR QUESTION.

Rev. John McQuoid Points Out the True Difficulty.

Rev. John McQuoid, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church, discussed the relation of the church to the labor question at the service last evening. He announced that the church, as an organization, can do either very little or very much for the betterment of the conditions of the laboring classes and continued by enumerating some of the reasons why so little is being done today, saying:

A goodly number of the capitalists and employers, against whom the general movement is directed, are members of the church. Sermons against them are not common today. Every Christian has known of similar instances, but the fact that children may be converted does not in the majority of cases come home to them. That is they hear of some evangelist at a distance converting children but do not seem to think it possible for the children in their own Sunday schools and congregations being led into the right path. The means to be employed in converting a little one are not different from those that are used in the case of a grown person, although people generally seem to believe that a peculiar tact is required. A simply Christian man, who tells what he himself believes, and who is sincere, is the preacher pointed out how that one cannot researches of twenty-two years of Darwin's life, resulting in the "Origin of Species," have been disproved to the entire satisfaction of many a congregation by the youngest scolding of our theological seminaries in a twenty-minute sermon. The best service that the church of today can render to humanity is the announcement of eternal principles, that we want is inspiring. We are not indifferent to the cries of our brethren without, but we don't know what to do. Some day all who believe that right shall prevail shall march forth under the banner of Jesus Christ, the best friend that the laboring man ever had, as the advocate of the people.

But the church of today is the mightiest engine for good that we have. It is full of right beliefs. And might we not ask, what might not the laboring man do for the church? What we need is to gain a better acquaintance with the laboring man. But while he holds aloof, so long will we be hindered in progress. You will never get people united in creed. But they may cooperate and work side by side for the working man.

YOUNG DESPERADES CAUGHT

Police Arrest the Members of a Gang of Youthful but Boldly Operating Thieves.

The police made several arrests Saturday evening that effectually broke up a gang of youthful desperados who have been committing many depredations recently in the south part of the city. The names of the boys apprehended are Bert Adams, Will Kehl, Harry Kehl, Fritz Swanson, Stanley Day and James Kennedy. The two last named lads are considerably younger than their comrades and have taken only a passive part in their wrongdoing. Not long ago the four big boys found and destroyed a cave built by Day and Kennedy in the bluffs near the corner of Nineteenth and Woolworth streets, and it was resentment, because of this act that led the little fellows to tell of the crimes of their older accomplices when the arrests were made.

Saturday night the Kehl brothers, accompanied by Day and Kennedy, went to Porter Bros' warehouse and, breaking the seal of a refrigerator car standing on the sidetrack and entering the car, they stole all the fruit they could carry away. According to the story told by Day, Harry Kehl was the one who acted as ringleader. Later in the evening at the corner of Tenth and Pacific streets, two of the boys were arrested. They were William Kehl and Swanson and they gave to the police the names of their companions in the theft and all were taken into custody before midnight.

After their arrest Stanley Day and James Kennedy turned state's evidence and told Chief White of a number of crimes committed by the other members of the crowd, among them being two holdups. They related that on the evening of October 28 Swanson, Adams and Henry Kehl held up a stranger on Sixteenth street south of the viaduct. Kehl had a revolver and Adams had a knife and with these weapons they threatened to kill a man who happened to be passing along the street late at night unless he promptly gave up what money he had in his pockets. They secured a few dollars on this occasion and escaped. Day and Kennedy were concealed behind a billboard and watched the whole transaction.

After learning that the little boys had seen the holdup Harry Kehl gave each of them 50 cents and told them to keep quiet about it.

Swanson and the two Kehls attempted another holdup the evening of October 9, but the man they intended to rob refused to stop at their bidding and took to his heels. Will Kehl tried to stop him by shooting, but his pistol would not work and the man escaped. This is the story told by Kehl to the Day boy.

The oldest of these lads is but 23 years old. He was a volunteer soldier, enlisted with the Second Nebraska regiment and was only recently discharged from service. The youngest of the crowd is 11 years old. The older boys will be held for trial and the younger ones will appear against them as witnesses.

FIREWORKS IN THE HOLY CITY

Jerusalem Celebrates the Advent of Royal Pilgrims from Germany—Decorations Confered.

JERUSALEM, Oct. 30.—The approach of the German imperial majesties to the city yesterday was made through triumphal arches and amid banners, garlands and ever-growing crowds that displayed in every way enthusiasm and delight.

The formal entry through the Jaffa gate was heralded by the roar of guns at the arches, where the Turkish band played the German anthem. From the tower of David Emperor William and Empress Augusta Victoria proceeded on foot amid wild cheering to the Church of the Holy Sepulcher, where they were received by the catholic, Greek and Armenian clergy, whose patriarch presented addresses eulogizing the devotion of Emperor William, who has since conferred decorations on the patriarchs.

Their majesties then proceeded to the German Evangelical church, where the pastor presented an address. At 6 o'clock in the evening (Saturday) a reception was held at the German consulate and later there was a general illumination of the city with a display of fireworks.

Today the imperial pair attended service at the Evangelical church in Bethlehem, afterward paying a visit to the Church of the Nativity. After the excursion to Jericho Djedev Pasha, former grand vizier, received Turkish governor of Crete and now attached to the person of Emperor William as a special representative of the sultan, will leave the imperial suite. It is rumored that this is due to some unpleasantness.

Emperor William has sent his portrait in brilliant to Tewfik Pasha, Turkish ambassador to Germany, who was among the high Ottoman dignitaries that received the emperor and empress in Constantinople.

Annie Martin Injured.

Annie Martin, who lives near the corner of Twentieth and Leavenworth streets, was seriously injured last night about 11 o'clock in an accident that occurred a block distant from her home. In alighting from a car on the Park line she stepped off backward and was thrown to the ground, striking heavily on the stone pavement with her head. When picked up by bystanders it was found that her scalp was severely cut and she remained unconscious in the drug store, where she was carried, for two hours before being removed to her home.

A stubborn cough or tickling in the throat yields to One Minute Cough Cure. Harmless in effect, touches the right spot, reliable and just what is wanted. It acts at once.
