REBATE FOR STOCKHOLDERS

Exposition Will Pay Seventy-Five Per Cent of Paid Up Stock.

PAYMENT ON OTHER STOCK IS DEFERRED

Directors Will Consider that Matter at Later Date—Question of Show for Next Year Still Undecided.

At a special meeting of the board of directors of the exposition held at the grounds yesterday afternoon a number of resolutions were received from the business men who are organizing the 1899 exposition to purchase the buildings and all other improvements, together with all other chattel property of the exposition association and all leasehold interests for $10,000. After a brief discussion the proposition was referred to the executive committee with instructions to report back to the board at the next meeting. The proposition specified that the new company should assume all existing contracts with lessors and the city of Omaha relative to leasing the grounds in the same condition that existed before the exposition was built. It was stipulated that $2,000 of the purchase price should be paid as soon as the proposition was accepted and the remaining $8,000 in December 1. The first payment was to be forfeited in case the backers of the enterprise failed to form a company to fulfill the remainder of the contract. The document was signed by P. E. Iler and Hayden Brothers, who assumed an equal liability for the purchase price. The discussion that occurred was hardly sufficient to indicate how the proposition was regarded by a majority of the directors. Mr. Lindsey suggested that before he acted on the matter he wanted to know who was behind it, as this association does not want to dispose of its property except to people who are likely to be successful in the enterprise. He also intimated that the consideration was hardly sufficient. Further debate was avoided by the reference to the executive committee.

remain are still actively at work, and the streets are lined with express wagons lumbering heavily away with huge loads of all conceivable material.

The intense rivalry between local express companies has resulted in a material saving for shippers. The rates that were first promulgated have been materially reduced and in most cases the goods are hauled for a very reasonable compensation. So far little has been done toward demolishing the buildings. Workmen are beginning to tear down the Iowa and Kansas buildings on the bluff tract, but aside from that, the new possessions of our government and would familiarize them with the habits and the customs of the people that inhabit these possessions. It would be very interesting, for example, to have an exhibit showing a street in San Juan, Porto Rico, also a street in Manila, and perhaps some local representations from the islands of Hawaii.

The second feature of the exposition that could possibly be secured would be to have the United States present here next summer the exhibit which it will display at the Paris exposition in 1900, and to have a number of American exhibitors that propose to exhibit in Paris in 1900 prepare their exhibits in time to exhibit in Omaha in 1899.

If these two features could be developed and certain states in the transmississippi region that did not have state buildings at our exposition this summer could be prevailed upon to erect buildings next year the continuance of the exposition might be very successful, and would certainly be very attractive. Yours truly, JOHN W. BATTIN.

CREATURES OF SURROUNDINGS

Discussing "The Philosophy of Contact." Rabbi Franklin last night showed that in all ages men have been better by reason of contact. Men and women, like the chameleon, the lizard that inhabits the wilds of Africa, take on the color of their surroundings and become like their associates to a great extent; thus those who continually associate with the bad follow their example, while those who associate with the pure in thought and spirit become better by reason of such associations. All persons are susceptible to the influences of the good and bad, which influences the rabbi described as being something like germs, infecting those whom they struck. Illustrating the influence of contact, the speaker cited the war sentiment that prevails the world over, showing that after the China-Japan war was declared nations that before had enjoyed the most friendly relations had suddenly shown the spirit of strife and had grown belligerent, one toward another. Were it not for the better influence of contact no authentic history of the world could ever have been written. Contact has resulted in making the civilized nations of the world more progressive, and in proof of this the speaker cited China, which is practically in the same condition physically, morally and socially as it was thousands of years ago, simply because its people have not come in contact with the more civilized and progressive nations and have shut their eyes to the light of truth. The people who are the most cosmopolitan stand the highest so far as civilization is concerned. They have come in contact with those of other countries and climes and have profited thereby.

Infant Girl Left on the Steps of St. Joseph's Church Last Night Taken In.

A tiny girl baby, not older than two weeks, snugly wrapped in flannel, tucked in a common wicker basket, was found last evening on the steps of St. Joseph's church by the parishioners at the close of service. Rev. Father Morris had just pronounced the benediction and some of the congregation were still kneeling, when others starting to leave the chapel discovered the little waif, who made its presence known by crying lustily. It was an exceptionally pretty infant, and the women of the congregation were enchanted with it. They lifted the baby from its improvised cradle and talked baby talk to it, while venturing guesses as to what station in life its parents belonged. The little one was clothed in a long dress of white lawn tied at the neck and wrists with pink ribbons and bows. The underclothes were woolen. Its garments were all sewed by hand, and of good material, leading those who found it to believe that the

MINNESOTA COLLEGIANS DINE

Alumni of Gopher State University Residing in Nebraska Enjoy a Reunion.

PLEASANT GATHERING HELD IN OMAHA

Half a Dozen of the Sons of "Ski-U-Mah" Recount Their College Experiences and Organize an Association.

Maroon and old gold were in evidence at the Millard hotel last evening, the occasion being a reunion and banquet of the alumni of the University of Minnesota residing in Nebraska. There were present: Rev. Charles W. Savidge and A. M. Welles, Omaha, '77; Judge W. W. Keyser, Omaha, '79; H. P. Shumway, Wakefield, '82; H. S. Abbott, master in chancery of the University of Nebraska, '85; George H. Morse, instructor in electrical engineering at the Nebraska university, '92. It was a representative gathering, there being two lawyers, one clergyman, one teacher, one journalist and one merchant. What these gentlemen lacked in numbers they made up in enthusiasm for their Alma Mater and spent an exceptionally pleasant evening recounting college experiences and laying plans for the future. The banquet was held in one of the private dining rooms of the hotel, an elaborate menu being served. The postprandial exercises were not the least enjoyable features of the occasion. A letter of greeting was read from President Northrop, congratulating the Nebraska alumni and conveying the cheering information that the Minnesota institution is on the high road to prosperity, with an enrollment for the year that will reach 3,000. This piece of good news was greeted with cheers and the familiar "Rah-rah-rah, Ski-U-Mah" of the gophers. Dr. W. W. Polwell, former president, now professor of social science and university librarian, sent a letter in Latin, which was read for the half dozen graduates to crack-not on any account of any lack of purity in diction, but—well, any college graduate who has mixed in the hurly burly of life for a few years understands how it is himself. After some discussion a permanent organization was formed for the purpose of promoting good fellowship and advancing the interests of Alma Mater. H. S. Abbott was elected president and A. M. Welles secretary. It was decided to hold two formal meetings a year, the next to be at Lincoln some time in February, at which time Chancellor MacLean, formerly a professor in the Minnesota university, will be a guest of the organization. A telegram was ordered sent to President Northrop, with the request that he read it in chapel this morning, informing the faculty and students of the organization of a Nebraska association and conveying the best wishes of the members for the prosperity of the institution. The secretary was instructed to reply to Doctor Polwell's letter, but adjured not to employ the Latin language lest he disgrace his Alma Mater. Mr. Morse was delegated to convey the best wishes of the association to the Nebraska State university and to request Chancellor MacLean to make the announcement before the student body. Plans for furthering the interests of the Minnesota university were discussed, commencement programs and the evening closed all too quickly. When the hour came to break up the alumni pledged anew their fealty to the institution that gave them their sheepskins and all expressed themselves as being glad that they were educational products of the leading university of the North Star State.

MRS. WAIT'S TWO LECTURES

Discourses on American Legends and American Wines Are Listened to with Interest.

Mrs. Frona Eunice Wait, a member of the California State Board of Horticulture, delivered two lectures in this city yesterday. The first was before the principals of the schools in the rooms of the Board of Education at 5 o'clock and the second at the Commercial club in the evening. In the afternoon Mrs. Wait spoke on "The Myths and Legends of Our Own Land." This is a subject that she has made herself thoroughly familiar with by years of study and her talk was of intense interest. She advocated the necessity of teaching legends of our country to the pupils of the public schools, saying that the average American youth is much better acquainted with the history of legendary Germany and England than he is with that of the land of his home. She cited the cliff dwellers, the Pueblo Indians and the other tribes that roamed the western plains and prairies before the advent of the whites as equally as interesting as the doing of the prehistoric Teutons. Evidence of their former prowess are strewn throughout the length of the land and their relics are to be seen in every museum. To study these myths and legends would give a field for literary work that would astound the world, and which would be more fascinating than the Niebelungen Lied. Her evening subject was "The Vineyards of California." The lecture was illuminated by the rising front garden of the hillside, showing the industry in every phase as it is carried on in the France of the west. The pictures were taken for the greater part in Napa and Sonoma counties, the heart of the grape-growing district, and represented several of the larger vineyards with the vines in full bearing, the hillside with its purple clusters. The lecturer, speaking with fluency and enthusiasm, explained the care that is exercised in gathering the grapes and conveying them to the presses and the intricacy of the methods of fermentation. To illustrate this process, views of the wine cellars of California were shown, which she considered a typical one, were thrown upon the screen. These gave a clear idea of the many stages that the capricious product goes through before it is ready for shipment. Mrs. Wait explained the processes of blending, filtering and ripening, and the training that a cellar-master must have to bring forth the best results. Interperated with the slides relating to the culture of the vine were views of a number of interesting natural objects in the state, including the old mill, which marks the spot where Robert Louis Stevenson wrote "The Silverado Squatters," the red-tiled roof of the Black Butte house of that stage coach of the Wells, Fargo & Co.'s express, Mount St. Helena and several of the old missions of the padres. Mrs. Wait is delivering her lecture on the vineyards of California in the larger cities throughout the country as an emissary of the Board of Horticulture of that state. She has for the last ten years been the official wine taster for the state, and is the only woman in the United States who is engaged in this profession. She can be said in no way to advocate the drinking of wine, but insists that those who do desire to satisfy a taste for it should use only the best, and should know something of how and where it is grown and the manner of its preparation. She will repeat her lecture on "Myths and Legends" before the Women's club of Omaha Monday afternoon.

COOK EDWARD JENSEN SHOT

John Pemberton Resorts a Slight with an Attempt at Murder.

ROW IN A DOWNTOWN RESTAURANT

Waiter Declines to Serve Negroes and the Subsequent Fight Ends in the Dangerously Wounding of the Night Cook.

Edward Jensen, night cook at the Calumet restaurant, 1411 Douglas street, was shot and seriously, if not fatally, wounded by John Pemberton, alias John Williams, a negro, at 4 o'clock yesterday morning. Pemberton is locked up at the city jail. His companion, Oscar Williams, to whom he handed his revolver after the shooting and who escaped capture at the time, is locked up in an adjoining cell. Williams was captured at the exposition grounds, where he was in hiding at noon yesterday by Officers Weisenberg and Dillon. Williams told the police that Pemberton fired the shot. The shooting was the culmination of a quarrel between Pemberton and Williams and Walter Harry Perigo, and the cook, Jensen, over Perigo's refusal to serve the negroes when they ordered food. Pemberton and Williams, accompanied by two colored women, Josie L. Jones and Mattie Johnson, entered the restaurant an hour before the shooting and took seats at a table in the front of the room. They had just left a ball at Hartman's hall, Fourteenth and Douglas street, and the men were under the influence of liquor. Perigo, the only waiter on duty at that hour, instead of waiting on the quarter went into the kitchen to be out of their sight, thinking they would grow tired of waiting and leave the place. After waiting about ten minutes the four became impatient and began throwing catsup bottles and other table furnishings against the wall to attract attention. The crashing glass brought Perigo into the dining room. As he entered a big sugar bowl was thrown at his head, but did not hit him. Pemberton, Perigo says, went up to him and demanded to know why he and party had been insulted. He was told that negroes were not served in the restaurant and Pemberton called him a vile name and struck him in the face.

Jensen Takes Perigo's Part.

Hearing the quarrel, Jensen, the cook, ran out of the kitchen and took Perigo's part. He struck Pemberton twice in the face and forced him out into the sidewalk. Williams and the women following. Shutting the door on the negroes, Jensen started back to the kitchen. Perigo, as soon as the cook turned his back to the door Pemberton opened it and fired at him. The bullet entered Jensen's right lung and he pitched forward into the arms of Perigo. Jensen was removed to the Presbyterian hospital, where his wound was pronounced to be of a very serious one. He has a fighting chance, the doctors say, for his life. After the shooting Pemberton handed his revolver to Williams and he ran east on Douglas street, just as Officers Hovey, Corneak, Flynn and Drummy, who had been attracted to the spot by the shooting, arrived on the scene. The fleeing man was ordered to halt, but only increased his speed, and disappeared in the darkness in a shower of bullets from the officers' revolvers. Pemberton and the women were taken to the station by the officers.
