Fruits of Expansion Exposed for the Benefit of American Imperialists-An Example to Be Shunned.

right of all peoples to be the arbiters of by degrees the administration of their own their own destiny. The friends of this country. But assuredly never in the history ciple upon which our government is in India today. If, therefore, reforms are founded, try to hide the naked selfishness not to be immediately introduced, if English under the clock of religion and civilization. They tell us that it is the duty of the American people to become knight errants and to go forth, like Don Quixote, redressing wrongs and emancipating islands from the control of imaginary monsters; had their share in the conquest and recon-that it is our "manifest destiny" to preach quest of India, declare plainly that I hope Christianity and civilization to the benighted heathens, Turks, Jews and Catholics, who have not the blessed advantage of enjoying that only genuine and infallible recipe for all mundane blessedness, called now-a-days Anglo-Saxon religion and civilization. Forsooth we are to lock arms with John Bull, insult every other nation on the face of the earth and make England's quarrel ours, when we have degraded ourselves to the same level of murderous greed and brutality. We are to make the Philippines another India, and we are to cheat, cozen, lie, rob and murder most foully to maintain and control our ill-gotten vassal territories. England in India.

England has had almost undisputed sovereignty over India for a hundred years, and may we ask if she has advanced Christianity or civilization among the 250,000,000 sub-fect to her sway? As a positive fact, the Hindoo of the lower castes in India is morally and intellectually superior to the lower order of Anglo-Saxon in Great Britain, let his religion be what it may. The former is a theoretical pagan, the latter is a practical one, in the most odious sense of the term. What has England done for India? I will let Prof. R. H. Hyndman, a well known political and social authority in London, speak on the question, and I hope those who advocate an American imperial policy of expansion and foreign alliances will carefully weigh these words, which form the concluding portion of Prof. Hyndman's recent pamphlet, entitled "The Approaching Catastrophe in India." He says:

"Here, then, we can see clearly that it is not English influence, or English sovereignty, or even English lack of knowledge and sympathy, that of themselves spell famine and ruin. But that a system of wholesale Europeanization in India, and absentee capitalism out of India, inevitably destroy whatever good there might otherwise be in our rule. The more shameful is it, alika to our statesmen, and to ourselves as Englishmen, that we should continue to bleed to death the 250,000,000 human beings for whose welfare we are directly rensible. The poverty of British India is no inevitable thing. The frightful famines of 1866, of 1876, of 1896, not to speak of minor visitations, are not due to natural causes. The poverty and the famines both are done my best, in season and out of season, to hring home to my countrymen the infamou wrong which is being done in their name, and to warn them of the catastrophe looming directly ahead of them. I have hoped against hope that I might, with others, succeed in moving them to action, while yet there was time. My work so far has been in vain, and I very much fear that it is now too late to save the situation. The whole of the dominant class in the United Kingdom is interested in maintaining the present system of ruinous and criminal extortion. Governorships, military commands, civil and military appointments at high salaries, fat pensions, well-paid home posts, interest and dividends on money lent, outlets for their sons, and investments for their money, close the eyes of the governing classes in England to the economic and political collapse which is now rapidly approaching."

"With a few honorable exceptions, the entire English press is controlled on this question by Anglo-Indian pensioners, whose sole object is to defend and maintain the existing misgovernment. It is sad, indeeds to see the inevitable collapse which must be the outcome of all this fatuity and greed, coming nearer and nearer each day, while Englishmen are deliberately deceived as to the truth."

Results of English Rule. "What a glorious empire India might have been under wise and sympathetic English leadership it requires but little imagination to conceive. But now famine and pestilence, robbery and oppression, are spreading discontent with our Raj throughout the country. The events at Poons where the assassins of Mr. Rand and Lieutenant Ayerst have not yet been caught, though the heavy reward of 20,000 rupees is offered to anyone who will betray the actual murderers; the riots at Chitpur, where Mohammedans and Hindoos, of the same race, though of different religion, we must

NDIA UNDER BRITAIN'S RULE bear in mind, combined once more against the Europeans; the spread of knowledge, not the Europeans; the spread of knowledge, not only in the cities, but in the country, of the truth that to the English rule is due the recurrence of famine, which knowledge to producing sullen discontent and stifled batred among the nations, from the SCATHING REVIEW OF NATIONAL GREED Burmab to Burmay; the systematic risings of the tribes along our northwest frontier, probably backed by the Ameer, simultaneously with the growing unrest of the Mohammedans within our border-all these things prove that economic dangers are not the only dangers which we shall have to face within the next few years. "Gladly would I see our country escape the LINCOLN, Nov. 14 .- To the Editor of retribution which it has so justly earned.
