The exposition in 1899 received an en-Chusiastic endorsement from 400 business men and one business woman at the Commercial club mat evening. The sentiment was all one way. Not a dissenting voice was heard. Those present were largely retailers, but some wholesalers and a number of professional men were there also. Something over $1,100 was added to the subscription list, bringing the total amount subscribed up to nearly $62,000.

At the request of the meeting Chairman J. Dumont appointed the following executive committee to conduct in favor of the end-of-the century show: Mesers. N. A. Kuhn, chairman; George W. Kelley, T. P. Cartwright, A. C. Raymer and H. J. Hughes. The following declaration was unani-
