A BUSY WOMAN.

Had a Good Reason for Not Calling on Her Neighbors.
One day during that period in the feud history of the mountains of West Virginia when for several years the blood of the mountaineers circulated freely over the face of the earth, relates the Washington Star, I was taking dinner at the house of one of the form of mountain society to mention those things and I talked about something else. A woman in a black alpaca gown was the presiding genius of the table and I did my talking to her. That she had lost two husbands I was sure, but I had understood she had married a third and had hopes of keep-
