SOME DECEMBER MAGAZINES

• 4:55 pm

Among the most attractive current magazines is Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly. The picture cover by W. Granville Smith is one of the most brilliant productions of that artist, who has made a special reputation in this line of work. The literary features are exceptionally good.

The December magazine number of the Outlook is its tenth annual book number. The Outlook was, it is believed, the first of the weekly papers to publish a special illustrated number a few weeks before Christmas, in which space and attention were largely devoted to books generally and to books of that season in particular. This annual book number has been, as many evidences show, of special interest to Outlook readers, not only in the articles and reviews, but also in the very extended announcements by the publishers themselves made in this number. It thus affords a record of the book output of the year and the season. This year a special feature of the book number is a fully illustrated article about "The Best Ten Books of the Year"-books which have been pronounced to be the best and most important books of the year by vote taken among the readers of the Outlook. The article does not consist of formal reviews, but of informal talk about the books and their authors. The current number of The Engineering Magazine will be found most interesting to specialists in the various departments represented by that publication. On December 8 the New York Independent will be fifty years old. The publishers hope to make that issue one of the best it has ever published, if not an event in the history of • 9:10 am literary journalism.

The November number of Our Day presents on its cover a color portrait of Rev.

Frank Crane, formerly of Omaha. The same number contains an article entitled "Is the Old Book True?" from the pen of the gifted Ainslee's Magazine for December is a Christmas number at once seasonable and refreshing. Anthony Hope contributes the first dialogue he has written since he finished his famous "Dolly Dialogues." Hon. Calvin S. Brice furnishes an interesting artiale under the title "An American Conquest in China." J. Lincoln Steffens writes on 'The Real Roosevelt." George R. Sims is represented by a beautiful Christmas story, "God Bless the Master of This House." Robert Barr continues a serial, "Tales of the

Rhine." Ian Maclaren, on "The Old-Fashioned Virtue of Kindness," publishes a lay sermon that is replete with tenderness and charm. "Books as Christmas Gifts," is the title of a very useful paper by John D. Berry. The long continued life of the Living Age would appear to be another instance of the survival of the fittest in that it has absorbed every one of its numerous rivals or imitators. Its present vitality is evidenced by the announcement that the Eclectic Magazine of New York will, with the issue of January, 1899, be consolidated with the Living Age and be hereafter known as the

Eclectic Magazine and Monthly Edition of "The True History of the Missouri Compromise," by Mrs. Archibald Dixon. The
