minister the oath to the appraisers. (Supra.)
No. 8587. National Life Insurance company against Martin. Affirmed. Appeal from Lancaster county. Sullivan, J.
1. Alleged errors in matters of procedure occuring at or before the trial cannot be reviewed on appeal. In this court the correctness of the judgment rendered on the pleadings and proofs is the only question to be considered.
2. An answer which states "that defendant has not sufficient knowledge or information as to the claim of the plaintiff and therefore demands and calls for strict legal proof thereof" presents no issue for trial.

THE SPOTTER SPOTTED.

How the General Manager Thrashed by a Brakeman. The old rairoad man from Texas spun one of his yarns to a New York Sun man. An easterner named Low, turned loose to shift for himself, was the hero of the yarn, and he was a scrapper from Srapperville. What he did when he turned up in Texas and joined a train is thus told by the O. R. M.: "Well, I thought I'd seen youngsters, but this fellow beat them all. He didn't drink much, and he didn't smoke at all, but he loved a fight better than anything in the world, and he used to hunt around for opportunities to mix it up with some one. I recall one night a couple of old friends of ours-train robbers-boarded us at about 11 o'clock and proceeded to CHICAGO. MILWAUKEE & St. Paul Railway — City Ticket Office, 1504 Farnam Street. OMAHA & ST. LOUIS RAILguns Low had taken them away from them and thrown them off the train. When he got through with the robbers they looked like a couple of wet rags. He kicked them out into the night, and that closed the incident.

"The conductor on our train was a decent guns Low had taken them away from them

"The conductor on our train was a decent sort of chap, but one of those fellows who is always imagining he's going to lose his job. I don't believe that the road had a more faithful employe. He used to collect quite a bit of money some nights from passengers and he got it into his head that he was suspected of robbing the road. The idea probably grew out of the knowledge that he could steal half of the fares every night if he wanted to without danger of detection. If he had been robbing the road I don't suppose he'd ever done any worrying, but being scrupulously bonest, he was haunted by the fear that he might be suspected of wrongdoing. I've seen lots of men like that in my time.

"Well, Low and the conductor struck up quite a friendship and the latter confided his fears to the former. He suspected every man that got on the train of being a spotter and finally convinced Low that he was under constant surveillance. made Low, who was one of the whitest boys that ever lived, mad clean through to think of the injustice being done to his friend. He used to say that if he ever got hold of a spotter he'd make him sorry that he ever took the job, and he meant every word he said.

we were pulling out of a small station Low came over the roofs of the cars to the replatform of one of the passenger cars where I was standing, took off his coat, vest, collar and necktie, and, handing them to me, " 'There's one of them cusses back there

"Well, one bright moonlight night just as

now. Come back in a minute and you'll see some fun. "There were three empty flat cars on the rear of the train, and when I got to the roof of the last freight car I saw a tall, thin man in the grasp of Brakeman Low. " 'Well, my beauty,' I heard Low say, 'so you're looking for shy fares, are you? Well, take this!' and he hit the man an awful clip under the car. "The man went down like a log, then jumped to his feet again and yelled for help. Low hit him again on the point of the jaw then jumped on him and gave him an awful pummeling. I thought it was about time o interfere and yelled to Low to quit. As I did so the stranger staggered to his feet and turned around so that the moonlight came down on his face. When I saw that face I almost fell off the car. It was Haskins, the general manager of the road. He was a frequent passenger on the night train and was likely to board us anywhere. He would jump on a freight car as often as he'd go into the passenger coach. On this occasion he just caught us as we were pulling out, and naturally jumped on the flat car in the rear. Low had never seen him before. "I gave a wail of despair as I recognized Haskins, and Low turned around and

" 'All right. I'm most through with him! "Then to my horror he grabbed Haskins by the collar, wheeled him around and kicked him off the train. And we were going twenty miles an hour. I ran down on the flat car.

and clear out." " 'What for?' he demanded. "'Do you know who that man you've probably murdered was?"

"'Low,' I said, 'get off at the next stop

'No, and I don't care.' " 'Well, it was Haskins, the general man-"If I expected Low to faint away or anything of that sort I was disappointed. He
