Strange Encounter and Narrow Ex-cape of a Farmer. George T. Bordeaux, a farmer living near Falling Springs, St. Clair county, Missouri, had a strange encounter Sunday morning with a large flock of crows. As a result be head, arms, hands and right eye. The birds would have pecked the man's eyes out, re-lates the St. Louis Republic, had it not been and Lee Aldrich, who drove them away. Although crows are carnivorous, it is seldom that they attack an animal or living being. At present that portion of St. Clair county, near Cahokia, Falling Springs, and surrounding territory, is almost overrun with crows. They multiply rapidly, and although be more than usually plentiful this year. Several of the farmers near Cabokia have pediment to the growth of the winter wheat In fact, the birds have become so bold that they do not fear to fly into a farmhouse in search of food.

Sunday morning Bordeaux, accompanied by his 12-year-old son, started out to clear his farm of the birds, and to erect scarcerows, Bordeau carried a double-barreled shotgun, but only a few rounds of cartridges.

The farmers succeeded in raising the flock of birds fom his cornfield, and when he went into his wheat field he could see nothing but flapping wings. He fired several rounds of shot in their midst, and a satisfied smile played over his features as he watched a half dozen birds drop at each shot. The effect of a bombardment of this sort is usually to frighten the flock away for a week or more. In this case, how-ever, the birds, led by a very large one, circled in the air, and then, seemingly at a given signal, they swooped down on Bordeaux and his son. Bordeaux saw the birds coming, and told his son to run home for some cartridges, because he intended to a 2:50 pm | wipe out the whole flock. He did not think the birds would attack him.

Nearer and nearer the birds circled about KANSAS CITY, ST. JOseph & Council Blufts

Nearer and nearer the birds circled about him. He still had two cartridges left and these he fired at the leader. The aim was bad and several of the crows behind the leader fell, but still the circle got closer. Looking up, Bordeaux could see nothing but an omup, Bordeaux could see nothing but an omephone, 310.

Joseph and St. Louis a 4:55 pm all:30 am a ttack. He had not long to wait. The leader of the flock flew straight at Bordeaux and, flapping its wings in his face, pecked and clawed at his head. A concerted attack followed by the other birds. Bordeaux, meanwhile, was not idle and he swung his gun right and left. The ground near him was strewn with the bodies of the dead and injured crows, but still the attack was continued. Bordeaux was getting weak. The crows had pecked his head; his ears were torn, his eyes injured and his face and arms were covered with blood. He was staggering from the effects of the attack of the birds and had almost fallen to the ground, when two hunters, Joseph McCabe and Lee Aldrich, well known young men of East St. Louis, arrived on the scene. They took in the situation at a glance and began a bombardment of the birds. This was unlooked for on the part of the crows and a moment later they deserted their victim and flew away. McCabe and Aldrich picked up the injured man and assisted him to his home, where the cuts and scratches on his face, head, arms and hands were dressed. deaux's right eye was seriously injured by the beak of one of the birds. His physicians fear he will lose the sight of that optic. McCabe and Aldrich, who had been out for a little hunting trip, thought the adventure enough sport for the day and returned to East St. Louis in time for dinner; not, however, before counting the bodies of the dead crows on the field where the battle ook place. According to McCabe, there were sixteen dozen dead crows.

DANCED AT WATERLOO.

One of the Belles of the Ball Immortalised by Byron. The Dowager Lady Carew of Woodsdown house, County Waterford, Ireland, has completed her 100th year. She was one of the 'fair women" who danced with men" at the ball given in Brussels on the eve of the battle of Waterloo. This event was celebrated by Byron in his stanzas in Childe Harold's "Pilgrimage," describing Leave. Arrive. the "Eve of the Battle of Waterloo." There are now living but two survivors of this ball. Lady Carew was Miss Cliffe, daughter of Major Anthony Cliffe of New Ross, when she danced in Brussels on that historic night. A year later, in 1816, she married brave men;

A thousand hearts beat happliy, and when Music arose with its voluptuous swell, Soft eyes looked love to eyes which spake
again,
And all went merry as a marriage bell;
But hush! Hark! A deep sound strikes like a rising knell.

Did ye hear it? No, 'twas the wind,
Or the car rattling o'er the stony street;
On with the dance! Let joy be unconfined, No sleep till morn when youth and pleas-To chase the glowing hours with flying feet— But, hark! That heavy sound breaks in once more,
As if the clouds its echo would repeat;
And nearer, clearer, deadlier than before!
Arm! Arm! it is—it is—the cannon's opening roar!

Ah! then and there was hurrying to and fro,
And gathering tears and tremblings of distress,
And cheeks all pale, which but an hour ago
Blushed at the praise of their own loveliness;
And there were sudden partings, such as Dress And there were sudden partings, such as press

The life from out young hearts, and choking sighs

Which ne'er might be repeated; who could guess

If ever more should meet those mutual eyes,

Since upon nights so sweet such awful morn could rise?

And there was mounting in hot haste; the steed
The mustering squadron and the clattering car Went pouring forward with impetuous steed,
And swiftly forming in the ranks of war;
And deep the thunder peal on peal afar,
And near the beat of the alarming drum Roused up the soldier ere the morning star;
While thronged the citizens with terror dumb Or whispering with white lips: "The feel They come! They come!"

And Ardennes waves above them her green Dewey with nature's teardrops as they pass, Grieving, if aught inanimate e'er grieves,
Over the unreturning brave—alas!
Ere evening to be trodden like the grass
Which now beneath them, but above shall grow grow

In its next verdure, when this flery mass
Of living valor, rolling on the foe And burning with high hope, shall moulder cold and low. Last moon beheld them full of lusty life, Last eve in beauty's circle proudly gay, The middlesh brought the signal sound of strife, The morn the marshaling in arms-the day

Battle's magnificently-stern array!
The thunder clouds close o'er it, which when rent,
The earth is covered thick with other clay,
Which her own clay shall cover, heap'd and pent, Rider and horse—friend, foe—in one red burial blent!

Twentieth Sails January 25.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 18.—It has been decided that the Twentieth United States regiment, now at Fort Leavenworth, will leave this city on the transport Scandia on January 25. The Senator and Ohio will be immediately put in condition for the return trip to the Orient. No assignment of troops has yet been made for these transports, but it is probable that a regiment of regulars will be sent on them to relieve the volunteer organizations. Several of the farmers near Cahokia have taken steps to rid their land of the birds, which of late have become a serious implies. Small pill, best pill, safe pilk.
