> MABASA Louis "Canon Ball"

A WONDERFUL TIMEPIECE. German Inventor. There is on exhibition in the Passage du Nord, Brussels, says the New York World, the most wonderful timepiece which ingenuity has yet devised.

This "welt uhr." or "world clock," as it is called by the inventor, Herr Noll, took five years to construct, and its estimated value is 60,000 marks ($15,000). The clock stands fifteen feet high, is a little over thirteen feet broad and five feet deep. It weighs between four and five tons. The plan of the clock is that of an early renaissance structure, walnut wood being employed for the frontage and the wings. The mechanism is calculated for a cycle of 100 years and requires winding once a month. Not only are the seconds, minutes, quarters, hours, days, weeks, months and years indicated, but also the chief religious festivals of the year and the four seasons. These latter are heralded in with music or the seathe play of beautifully carved figures. These make their appearance with mathematical accuracy at the second on which each of the four seasons commences, according to the
