DECISION IN THE WARRANT CASE. City Officials Confess that Main Points Are Not Touched Upon. City Attorney Wadsworth has received a certified copy of the supplemental decision of the supreme court in the city warrant case of N. C. Phillips against W. B. Reed, city treasurer.

Despite the decision of the supreme court City Treasurer Reed does not feel that it is safe for him to continue to pay warrants issued for current expenses and he will refuse to do so until a more definite decision is arrived at by the courts.

The decision of the supreme court, while ruling that the warrants issued for the current indebtedness of the city take precedence over the old warrants, fails to touch upon the vital question involved, namely, the constitutionality of the law as applied to a city incorporated as a city of the first class subsequent to 1851.

N. C. Phillips, appellant, against W. B. Reed, appellee, per curiam. The foregoing opinion was withdrawn on our motion for the purpose of adding a brief statement on a point distinctly in issue, but which counsel did not see fit to present.

This point counsel for some reason studiously avoided to mention, namely, in stating two propositions only, as raised by the demurrer. These we disposed of in the original opinion.

Counsel had a right, of course, to rest their client's claims upon any ground they saw fit. We only desire to say the case was decided upon the theory on which it was tried, viz., that the statute mentioned applied to the city of Council Bluffs.

This second decision of the supreme court in this case received very little notice, as the case was brought before Judge Smith in the district court on demurrer, at his suggestion the declaration that Council Bluffs was organized as a city of the first class subsequent to 1851 was incorporated in the petition and incorporated in the record that was filed with the supreme court in Des Moines.

OVER A MILLION. Dr. Hilton's Specific No. 3. It cures a Cold, The Grip and PREVENTS Pneumonia.

Dr. Hilton's Specific No. 3 is the first remedy ever offered to the public to Cure a Cold, the Grip, and PREVENT PNEUMONIA, and it is the ONLY remedy to do so that can do it. It was first advertised January, 1891. Since then over a million bottles have been sold. What better testimonial to the efficacy of this remedy could we have? If your druggist doesn't have it send for it in P. O. stamps or money order to DR. HILTON, Lowell, Mass., and receive a bottle by return mail.

FEE IN ESTATE MATTERS

State Treasurer Herriott Issues a Circular of Instructions. Compensation That Is Allowed By Law.

New Ruling Comes Out in the Matter of Collecting and Reporting the Inheritance Tax as It Becomes Due.

Yesterday County Attorney Kilpack received from State Treasurer Herriott a circular containing instructions relative to reporting estates subject to the state collateral inheritance tax. These instructions are issued with the purpose of simplifying the business and informing the county attorneys as to the manner in which they can receive their compensation for reporting and attending to cases in which estates are subject to the tax.

In view of the fact that the fee is a percentage of the tax paid into the state treasury, the treasurer will not issue a requisition for the fee until the tax or a considerable portion thereof has been paid into the state treasury. It is not infrequently that estates realize much less in the final settlement than the representative anticipated at the time of the decedent's death and the tax proves to be less than $200. To avoid the complications and disputes that might ensue, the rule of not allowing the reporting fee until the tax or a considerable portion has been paid has been adopted.

Where information concerning the liability of an estate for the collateral inheritance tax reaches the treasurer of state from private or official sources other than the county attorney, no fee will be allowed. The treasury department receives such information from the collector of the state of the time and place of appraisal of real estate, or is notified by a bank or trust company of stocks or funds in their possession subject to the tax, or by a copy of the inventory and appraisal, or in any manner learned of an estate. This is sufficient information to enable the treasurer to completely cover the estate, to report the representatives of estates and to enforce the assessment and collection of the tax.

The treasurer will, however, endeavor to satisfy county attorneys during their terms of office of all estates reported to him by other parties, in order to prevent unnecessary reports, but his failure so to notify them will not be recognized as sufficient ground for the demand for the reporting fee. Frequently will happen that county attorneys will be directed by judges to look after the estate of the state in accordance with the general provisions of the code (section 301), prescribing their duties, or in regulation with rule 4 of the "rules and regulations" of the supreme court, for the collection of the collateral inheritance tax. County attorneys may, on their own initiative, represent the state in probate proceedings, representing the state in district courts. Such services, however, performed under the direction of the courts or attorneys, do not constitute a ground for the demand for the reporting fee.

Where information concerning the liability of an estate for the collateral inheritance tax reaches the treasurer of state from private or official sources other than the county attorney, no fee will be allowed. The treasury department receives such information from the collector of the state of the time and place of appraisal of real estate, or is notified by a bank or trust company of stocks or funds in their possession subject to the tax, or by a copy of the inventory and appraisal, or in any manner learned of an estate. This is sufficient information to enable the treasurer to completely cover the estate, to report the representatives of estates and to enforce the assessment and collection of the tax.

Fees for reporting estates and for legal services in the collection of the inheritance tax are allowed and paid, but the fee charged against an estate is not paid into the treasury until after the expiration of the term of office of the county attorney who rendered the services.

Where, however, instructions have been received from the treasurer to begin action to collect the tax and the county attorney has taken any steps in the matter, no fee will be allowed. In cases where a county attorney has initiated proceedings in his district court to collect the tax, but is unable to obtain the decision before the expiration of his term and it is necessary to apply for an extension of the assessment and the fee of 3 per cent upon the tax paid will have to be apportioned between the county attorney and the state.

The fee allowed county attorneys for reporting estates and for legal services are not paid by administrators or executors or by the latter deeding out the estate, but by the county attorney. Nor are such fees paid out of or chargeable against the estates of decedents unless the state attorney is in probate. County attorneys are to be paid for such services upon requisition of the treasurer of state, who shall issue a warrant to the person designated.

Man with a Bad Record Arrested for a Mississippi Murder. The announcement that "Doc" Butler, alias J. J. Wilson, had been arrested in Cedar Rapids on an old charge of murdering a deputy sheriff in Jackson, Miss., after being released from the state penitentiary at Anamosa, where he had completed serving a term for the robbery of the First National bank of Griswold, is of peculiar interest here, as it was in Council Bluffs that Wilson was one of the gang which, after robbing the Griswold bank, came to the city and were located at the Klail hotel by Deputy Sheriff O'Brien and Hoeker. After being placed under arrest and when near the county jail they broke and ran. One of the fugitives shot and wounded O'Brien through the side and he was unable to make his escape. O'Brien was taken to the hospital and died there. Wilson was captured, and Wilson and Smith were taken to the state penitentiary at Anamosa. His partner, Smith, was sent to Fort Madison. Two years later "Bozzie" Melfugh, who was identified as the third member of the gang who shot O'Brien, was brought here and after a somewhat sensational trial in the district court was sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary. At this trial both Smith and Wilson were brought from the penitentiary to testify on McHugh's behalf.

From statements made while in jail here it was evident that Wilson was in constant dread that when he had finished his term for the murder in Mississippi he was a man of considerable talent and education, as "Doc" Butler was known by the letters which he wrote while in the penitentiary to the late Colonel Dalley of this city, who had acted as his attorney.

Wilson had several aliases and was known to the police all over the country as "Doc" Butler, "Bozzie" Butler, J. B. White and J. J. Wilson, but he is known to have been his right name. He was born in Pittsburg, Pa., about 42 years ago, where he has relatives and connections who are some of the most respectable and influential citizens of that city. He had the advantage of a first class education and as a young man graduated from Amherst college.

His criminal career commenced about four years after he graduated from college. He was holding a lucrative and trustworthy position in a large steel firm when fast living started him on the downward path. Being pressed for money he appropriated the funds of his employers and skipped to Cincinnati. Here Wilson made the acquaintance of the notorious "Buck" Wales and with him was associated in the famous robber-

Wales of the Manhattan bank of New York. By the assistance of Wilson, Wales was able to escape at the time, but was captured after two years by the Pinkertons and was sentenced to two years' imprisonment. This, however, was commuted to six months upon the representations of Wilson's friends that he intended to return to the state and was probably did, but fell from grace again and was suspected of being mixed up in several bank robberies in Ohio, Kentucky, Pennsylvania and West Virginia.

In 1892 Wilson with two companions planned to rob the leading bank of Jackson, Miss. While in the act of drilling the safe they were surprised by a deputy sheriff, who opened fire on the trio. Shots were exchanged and the deputy sheriff was killed and one of the robbers desperately wounded. Wilson and the other of his companions made their escape and went to New Orleans. The robber who was wounded turned state's evidence and escaped the gallows by declaring that Wilson was the man who had shot and killed the deputy sheriff.

The first job of safe cracking in New Orleans resulted in Wilson's arrest and he was sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment. At the completion of his sentence he was turned over to an officer from Jackson, Miss., and was being taken there to answer to the charge of murder when he made his escape by jumping through the window of the train in which he was. Although heavily handcuffed he succeeded in making his escape, remaining secreted in the swamps and subsisting on roots and berries for several weeks. When the hue and cry after him had died down Wilson turned up at St. Joseph, Mo., where he found some of his former companions and it was through the scheme to rob the First National bank of Griswold was hatched, which finally resulted in his arrest in this city and sentence to the penitentiary at Anamosa.

Funeral of Mrs. Ballard. The funeral of Mrs. Sarah Johnson Ballard was held yesterday afternoon from her late residence on First avenue. The services, which were conducted by Rev. W. S. Barnes, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of which deceased had been one of its most prominent members, were largely attended, evidencing the esteem in which Mrs. Ballard was held. The handsome casket was completely covered with floral offerings, conspicuous among the number being one, the tribute from the members of the Woman's Christian association, who with their president, Mrs. O. H. Lucas, were present in a body. Rev. Barnes in his sermon paid an eloquent tribute to the deceased and her many noble qualities, and lamented that she was not more prominent in the unostentatious manner in which she aided charitable works of all kinds. The remains were laid to rest in Fairview cemetery, being followed to the grave by a long cortege. Messrs. R. P. Orlander, Charles T. Hart, and Dr. H. H. Hill, F. B. Warner and Frank Keys acted as pallbearers.

THIRTY THOUSAND FOR A FLOWER. The Boston florist who developed the now famous Mrs. Lawson pink sold his entire stock of 8,000 plants to Thomas W. Lawson, husband of the woman for whom the pink was named, for $30,000. The florist was given charge of the plants and will manage their sale. The pink is from four to five inches in diameter, about twice the size of the ordinary carnation. The shade is of a beautiful pink. The plants are hardy and stand through the winter.

The flower is vigorous and has an enduring quality that it has been known to "keep" for fifteen days. It was at first cultivated by Peter Fisher of Ellis, Mass., and the plant as at present grown is the result of years of painstaking effort and care by Thomas F. Galvin of Boston, who got control of the flower three years ago, paying about $2,000 for twenty-five plants. Mr. Galvin named the pink after Mrs. Thomas W. Lawson because of his close personal friendship with Mr. and Mrs. Lawson and because they are interested deeply in flower culture.

Soon after getting control of the stock Mr. Galvin began advertising the flower and exhibited it in different cities. Large sums have been offered by lovers of flowers and a few days ago an offer of $5,000 came from H. N. Higginbotham of Chicago, who wanted to transfer the stock to his big, new greenhouse and to remove the pink after his wife, Mrs. Lawson, died. The offer was for $15,000. Then a New York firm of florists, then Mr. Lawson made up his mind, as he says in a letter to Mr. Galvin, that the pink should not leave Boston if it was only a matter of dollars, and he offered $30,000 for the entire stock and it was accepted. Mr. Galvin says of the pink:

"The color of the Mrs. Lawson carnation is a beautiful pink on a sturdy stem, and it has wonderful vitality. The flower is from four to four and one-half inches in diameter and will last fifteen days. Several English noblemen have been endeavoring to secure a slip of it, but they were unable to do so under any consideration. Every day orders of this carnation to different cities on every outgoing steamer. I send orders to persons in Europe. During the holiday season the flower retailed at $5 a dozen, but I could not get enough to supply the demand. It is now selling at $10 a dozen to hold this flower here. It is good for from ten to fifteen years longer."

Mr. Fisher, the cultivator and originator of the flower, is well known to the florists of Boston and is considered an expert in growing flowers, especially pinks. In explanation of the culture of the Mrs. Lawson pink Mr. Fisher says that the plants year after year and crossed them, and he used all devices known to horticulturists to produce a large pink.

Huckster's Innocence. An English farm laborer recently went to a small store in the city and asked for "a pound of bacon." He produced the bacon and cut a piece off, but could not find the pound weight. "Oh, never mind the pound weight," said he. "Ma's fat just weighs a pound, so put that bacon 'n' scales."

The woman concerned placed the bacon into one side of the scales, while the man put his foot into the other side, and, of course, got good care to have good weight. "But the woman was wrapping the bacon up the pound weight was found and on seeing it the man said:

"Now, you see if my fat don't just weigh a pound."

The pound was accordingly put into one scale and the man's fat into the other, this time only just to balance.

The old woman on seeing this said: "Wha, I never seed aught so near afore! Here's a red herring for thee honesty, ma lad!"

TALE OF EARLY MORMON DAYS

Leader Charles E. Thompson and His Town of "Preparation."

CORRUPT PROPHET DUPES HIS FOLLOWERS. Compels Them to Surrender All Their Goods and Money Into His Hands—The Worm Finally Turns.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 29.—(Special)—On the banks of the Soldier river in Iowa stand rolling prairies and about fifteen miles from the present site of the town of Onawa, in Monona county, stands the site of the old Mormon town of Preparation. About this place half a century ago were enacted many strange scenes—scenes which few men now living can remember. Preparation was founded by Charles E. Thompson, a Mormon prophet, as later developments showed, principally for the benefit of himself. His rule lasted for several years and while it was in progress he certainly made the best of it.

It was in the year 1852 that Thompson left St. Louis, where he had gone from Nauvoo, where he had been in company of Joseph Smith, and he came to Iowa to establish a church in St. Louis, but he saw more profit in a community of his own. So, accompanied by about sixty families of the faithful, he left St. Louis to search in the upper Missouri river valley for a good location for a settlement. In Monona county they found a place, which they named "Preparation," and he and his followers began his utopian life.

The story of his rule over this settlement would fill volumes. At any rate, Thompson began to have visions and communicated to the people that they must convey all their real and personal property to him. He had them all gathered together and he had the lands and ere long Thompson found himself the sole possessor of 3,000 acres of the best land in Iowa, all the cash of the people, their jewels and in fact everything they had down to clothes. He even took their clothing and made the people wear a garment all in one piece, men would not be distinguished from women. Preparation also had people who were to be prepared for the "law of sacrifice" was the teaching they received from the prophet, or "Father Ephraim," as Thompson styled himself.

The Dupes Revolt. This sort of thing ran along for about five years and then came trouble for the monarch of Preparation. His people grew suspicious and demanded that he give an accounting of all that money he had in his hands, their lands and other property. Thompson had made several trips to St. Louis and had lived riotously and could not put up the property or securities. So he ran away to Onawa and remained there for a while. The elders demanded a settlement and Thompson with him other men, Guy C. Barnum, started back to Preparation.

Thompson was going to have just one more vision for luck, but he was met by a woman who told him he would be hanged if caught. Then the once high priest and "Father of Preparation" fled to Onawa, followed by angry members of the church of Zion. Thompson rushed to the home of Addison Oliver, where he was secreted in the garret. His wife came also and she had with her a peck measure of jewelry—all taken from the people of Preparation. Men came to the house with ropes and seized the present judge, John F. Oliver, then a boy of 5 years, nearly to death. That night Addison Oliver, afterward congressman and district judge, drove to St. Louis and reported the matter to the courts. Thompson fled back to Onawa, where he tried to start up a new religion. The courts divided the property among the people of the Mormon settlement and their once haughty leader left with a broken heart. Thompson wandered back to St. Louis and stayed in Philadelphia for a time in 1857, when it is said he died in poverty.

Judge Addison Oliver is still living in Onawa, and he has in his possession the large wheel in which was fitted a mountain range, resembling in other ways the followers in. He also has files of the old paper, "Zion's Harbinger and Weekly Messenger," which Thompson had published and which was one of the earliest publications in western Iowa. The papers make strange reading to the people of this day. Few if any of the original members of the strange colony still reside about Monona county, but the memory of their trials and tribulations still remain in the minds of the older members of the municipality.

FOUR MILES OF TRACK A DAY. Rapid Progress Expected on the Trans-Baltic Road this Year. The latest news of the Trans-Baltic railroad, reports the New York Sun, that the government is already laying the rails along the southwest shore of Lake Baikal. An immense ferryboat, large enough to transport an entire train to the opposite shore, which is now under construction, is being broken up the ice, is now building. Next spring the grading of the very difficult part of the line around the southern end of the lake will begin, and when this part is completed ferriage across the lake will be abandoned. It is expected to build the trans-baltic section this season with remarkable rapidity. For a long distance toward the Pacific it is intended to lay the rails at the rate of four miles a day. While passengers and freight are now being carried from Europe to Irkutsk it cannot be said that the road is entirely completed. There are a few gaps, but no bridges over the Oka and Yenisei rivers, across which trains are transported on ferries.

A train of Lux runs once a week from Moscow as far east as Tomsk. Beyond that a passenger train runs daily further east to Krasnoyarsk and three times a week as far as Irkutsk. Only second-class cars are run between Krasnoyarsk and Irkutsk. The cost of a second-class ticket from Moscow to Lake Baikal is about $40 and the journey lasts seven days. All the coaches have sleeping tanks.

The Russians are now building the road without any foreign engineers, except that a number of Italian subcontractors are at work. The enormous quantity of rails required is expected to be built in Siberia. It is a passenger train with a sidecar built, so that it necessary the entire main route may be cleared for military trains. It is a remarkable feat that the freight and passenger movement already exceeds the transportation facilities. Thus far, however, it is expected to be chiefly in carrying the goods of Manchuria to the numerous emigrants who are sent there by the government. Two hundred thousand fam-

TUMOR EXPELLED. Unqualified Success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Mrs. ELIZABETH WIELOCK, Magnolia, Iowa, in the following letter describes her recovery from a very critical condition:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been taking your Vegetable Compound, and I feel much better. I have done wonders for me in relieving me of a tumor. My health has been poor for three years. Change of life was working upon me. I was very much bloated and was a burden to myself. I was troubled with another ailment, also palpitation of the heart and that bearing-down feeling, and could not be on my feet much. I was growing worse all the time, until I took your medicine. After taking three boxes of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Lozenges, the tumor passed from me. My health has been better ever since, can now walk quite a distance and am troubled no more with palpitation of the heart or bloating. I recommend your medicine to all sufferers from female troubles. It is hardly reasonable to suppose that any one can doubt the efficiency of Mrs. Pinkham's methods and medicine in the face of the tremendous volume of testimony.
