All Sales in the History of the Institution Put in the Background During the Recent Lively Flurry.

NEW YORK, Jan. 29 .- (Special.) -- Henry

The business of the Stock exchange for the last week has exceeded everything in the history of that institution. Monday's sales heat all previous records. Litture back of the fact that one takes chares were reported as having been dealt in and it is fair to assume that 50,000 or more shares beyond that went by default during the excitement prevailing. The previous largest number of transactions was Febru-20, 1893, when 1,474,000 chares were dealt in. That was the memorable Philadelphia & Reading day when McLeod got supreme control of the anthracite coal output. For the first four days of this week the transactions aggregated 5.775,000 shares; for the same four days of last January the sales were 1,467,100 shares.

These totals may, in some degree, represent the large increase in late years of the amount of securities dealt in on the exchange, but they still more express the plich of enthusiasm to which the current expectations of national development have raised the public mind. Wall street has never before witnessed such a flood of buying orders as has been represented in these operations. The extraordinary volume is not due so much to manipulative maneuvers of professional operators as to a continuous stream of orders coming from all parts of the country. The main cause of the ac- tions. In the opinion of some conservative tivity lies in the mail orders from the considerable class in the interior cities and towns who have been making money for the last two years of abundant crops, while New York has been grumbling about un-satisfactory business. Those profits have gone into savings as much as into creases of ordinary expenditures and the current excitement is bringing out the hoards partly for permanent investments, but perhaps more for speculative ventures. We have therefore an "outsiders" market in a sense and to an extent never before witnessed and it is the largeness of thus sanguine element, much more than any purely local speculation, that accounts for this extraordinary buying virtually irrespective of prices. For many months past the prosperity of the west and southwest has shown itself not only in increased earnings of the railroads, but also in the unprecedented amount of funds in the interior banks and in rates of interest almost as low as those current at New York. This has led to a steady stream of investment orders from those sections and now these accumulations are being drawn into the speculative movement of Wall street with a rush that creates wonder as to where all the money is coming from.

London Business.

London, for some time past has been selling to an almost unlimited extent calls on American securities and the rapid rise in the Vanderbilts has completely upset their equilibrium. Immense orders from that quarter came in conflict with the accumulation of orders over Sunday from all parts of this country which made the competition on the buying side last Monday morning greater, probably, than was ever experienced on the floor of the exchange. The natural conditions prevailing at the present time in this country are of course in favor of the bull side of the market to an extent greater than at any previous period. When William H. Vanderbilt sold to a syndicate 300,000 shares of his New York Central stock at an average price of 130 the company was paying 8 per cent divicontinuation of 8 per cent for three years. Engagements for yarns a continuation of 8 per cent for three years. At that time it required a stock to pay 8 per cent dividends to justify its market America is buying fairly and the home trade America is buying fairly and the home trade July only pays 4 per cent dividends and the stock sells at 140. The money and business conditions of this country have undergone a change in the same proportion since that time. It is due to this change that a 4 per cent stock now sells as high as an 8 per cent stock formerly did. The investment interest rate has gone down to stay in this country, to be in keeping with unchanged. the rate prevailing in the European money centers. The reason for this is the gen eral confidence, both at home and abroad, in our maintenance of the gold standard, together with the recognition of the vast resources of the country, When William Jennings Bryan was nominated for the presdency the depression prevailing was so great (as was the despair caused by it) that it made most people desperate. It was no wonder, therefore, that so many voters wanted the country deluged with 16 to 1 silver money. They were really like a drowning man snatching out for a straw to save themselves, but with the marvel-ous change in the money situation that 10/1110 now presents itself the country has gone to the other extreme by being overburdened with gold money. The United States treas-ury, as well as the banking institutions of the country, are perplexed to know how to take care of their huge loads. It is the return of confidence that now makes a per cent property in this country sought for by everybody who has money to invest both at home and abroad and this change has come to stay. Under such conditions, therefore, anybody who now advocates 16 to 1 silver must be non compos mentis.

The excitement in American rails has proved contagious and the rise in values there spread to specuative stocks gener-ally. While the influences affecting the market remain favorable it is not likely that a break will occur. It is reported that Americans are buying here and racing for stocks, which is taken to indicate an intention to raise prices further, though these closed yesterday slightly lower. The supply of cornfed cattle has been con-siderably short of the requirements of pack-ers and they have been forced to ship in a good many cattle from other selling points in order to fill their orders for product. This has insured an active demand every day and packers have wanted the cattle badly enough to bid up very strong on them as compared with other markets. On some kinds of cattle the market is probably a dime higher for the week, but on most kinds the whole situation could be summed up as a good, strong market. On some days feed-ers have been bidders on the warmed-up cattle and on such days prices have looked high on them, but there is always danger of a sudden slump on warmed-up stuff con-sequent upon a temporary let-up in the demand. These facts indicate a probability that the great rise in the dividend paying securities may have been materially influ-enced by investment purchases. Under these circumstances the question arises whether speculations begin with the better class of properties and, on the strength of the feel-ing thereby created, proceed to the cheaper speculation has been

Island sound is a queer landmark which puzzles the yachtsmen greatly until they know what it is. From a distance it looks like a large Indian tepee. On a nearer view it is seen to be the bow of a finely modeled yacht, apparently sticking right up out of the earth. Appreaching closer the puzzled yachtsman discovers it is really a house. This freak structure stands in Hawkins shipyard, overlooking the bay. Its history involves the story of a novel and ingenious operation on the old steam yacht Caprice, by which it was transformed into another boat and a building. The Caprice was sixty-six feet long and was purchased in 1895 by Benjamin M. Whitlock, who admired its par-icularly fine lines. He decided to have a arger boat, however, and wanted it to be a suplicate in model of the Caprice. To incure this he determined to have the Caprice extended fore and aft, keeping as much of the original midship section of the hull as possible. He accordingly engaged H. J. Gielow, the designer of fast-going steam yachts, to make the plans and the work was done in Hawkins' yard at Port Jefferson. The Caprice which had formerly been the Henry Douglas, built in 1885 for Charles Schoen of Philadelphia, was carefully taken apart. When this was completed the old yacht stood in three sections. From the midship section, only twelve feet long, a new yacht eighty-five feet over all was built and named the Tekla. About this time Hawkins discovered that he needed a new paint shop, so he bought the complete bow section and stood it on end in his yard, with the sharp cutwater pointing to the sky. In the starboard side of the deck he cut a door and the forward hatch served nicely as a window.

Hawking then had a building twenty feet high that afforded him a alrge, commodious well ventilated room with an absolutely water-tight roof. The short bowsprit he makes use of as a flagstaff and that is what

The market on lumbs, however, was slow and buyers did not appear to be anxious for them. The market on desirable kinds of sheep has been goad all the week and values have gradually firmed up so that at the close of the week it is safe to call the market all of 16625c higher. The buyers have evidently wanted supplies, and while the re-celpts have been gradually growing larger they have been mone too large to meet re-quirements of buyers. The lamb market, however, has not been of such a satisfactory to the sellers. One day thre would be a pretty fair demand, then the market would wase off the nixt day or be lower, and then it would go back again, and so it has switched about all the week, and at the close is not much changed from what it was last week. To say that thas remained steady, however, is not saying much, as it has not been much good any time for more than a week back in the estimation of sellers. Quotations are: Good to 'choice fed western wethers, $1,8092460; fair to good, $2.7092360; choice mestern yearlings, $14092 4.16; fed ewes, £2.0003.60; good to choice native lambs, $1.50924.90; good to choice that is alloged $1.50923.50; dood to shoke $1.60924.80; feeder sheep, $2.5093.50; a.1.60; cull lambs, $1.00942.50; good western native lambs, $1.50924.90; good to choice that the alterations in it quite as radical and star-ting as his metamorphosis of the hull of the old Caprice. In this case, however, the alterations were made in the rig of the craft. From its original fore-aud-aft rig it was transformed to a topsail schooner by putting yards on the foremast.
