

PUBLIC LIBRARY METHODS

Various Means Employed to Satisfy the Wants of Patrons.

INSTRUCTIVE FACTS FOR BOOK BORROWERS

Aims of the Management and Conveniences of the Library Set Forth in Paper Read at the Woman's Club.

The aim of the management of a free public library is to make its contents the greatest possible value to the community. To do this it is necessary to make known to the public what books are on the shelves and how they may be drawn for use.

In a library like our own, where free access to the shelves is not permitted, except in the reference department, it is necessary to be guided almost entirely by the card catalogue, as this is the only entry of books.

As you all know, we have at the library a lecture room with a seating capacity of 150. This is furnished free, on application, to any club or society which may wish to use it for educational purposes.

Convenience of the Library.

As you all know, we have at the library a lecture room with a seating capacity of 150. This is furnished free, on application, to any club or society which may wish to use it for educational purposes.

It would seem to be an easy matter to induce the study clubs and classes to make use of the library, but it is not.

It is my ambition to have the members of the woman's club use the public library as much as they belong to them, which it does.

May I not urge that the members use it more freely and make greater demands than they have done before.

Circulation of Books.

In many very large circulating libraries it is the policy of the management to make the home circulation of books as large as possible and to permit the reference use to be entirely secondary.

Lists of the books to be used in connection with the course might be printed in the monthly bulletin which is issued by the library.

The museum, which promises to be a feature of great interest in the near future, has already felt the substantial encouragement of the club.

PHYSICIANS CANNOT AGREE

Difference of Opinion as to Who Should Look After Certain Charity Cases.

When the attention of the city physician was called to the illness of Adolph Ebel, Tenth and Nicholas streets, Friday afternoon, he said it was a county case.

"How do you distinguish between county and city cases, doctor?"

"We came to an agreement recently through the advice of the city and county attorneys," said the city physician.

"The library contains about 50,000 volumes, subscribed for over 100 newspapers and periodicals, has a large collection of valuable clippings, which may be used for reference, and has catalogues and indexes, making all of this material perfectly accessible."

"Besides these there are other helps which are useful in preparing an outline for study. Adams' Manual, Supplement to the Adams' Manual, 'Select Lists of Novels and Tales,' Sargent's 'Reading for the Young,' with supplement, Dixon's 'Subject Index to Prose Fiction,' Moore's 'Bibliography of Education' published by the International Education series, Sturges' and Kruehler's Annotated Bibliography of Fine Art, and many special lists prepared by other libraries.

"In this connection I will say that the library is willing to gather together in one place material on any given subject where it may conveniently be consulted and be of service to the club. That is, have a small collection of books withdrawn from circulation and reserved for a time for the use of the members, for in this way it is possible to accommodate a greater number of people.

IMPRISONED IN THE TOWER

A Patriot of the Revolution Confined in London's Famous Dungeon.

MINISTER LAURENS' CAPTURE AND RELEASE

An Episode of the Battle for Freedom that Provoked the War Between Britain and the United Provinces of the Netherlands.

The great interest taken by readers of our journal, in matters relating to our army and navy, will justify a slight review of the remarkable events touching the imprisonment of this member of the revolutionary congress, and the accredited minister to the Netherlands, in the historic and famous Tower of London.

John Laurens was a man of an active and impulsive nature, high-spirited and energetic in the cause of the revolution.

On the last day of November, 1777, he was elected president of the congress, but afterwards resigning that high and important position, he was selected and commissioned by the congress as its minister to the Netherlands, and directed to enter into important treaty relations with that republic.

On August 13, 1778, he started on his mission, and on the Atlantic in a small sailing vessel named the Mercury, and twenty-two days thereafter this vessel was captured by the English cruiser Vestal, Captain Keppel in command, and who treated Mr. Laurens with the greatest kindness while holding him prisoner.

At the time of his capture Mr. Laurens had in his possession valuable and important documents which it would be highly injurious to the Dutch government to have fall into the hands of the English.

At the time of his capture Mr. Laurens had in his possession valuable and important documents which it would be highly injurious to the Dutch government to have fall into the hands of the English.

A Prisoner of State.

It must be borne in mind that the war had been in progress several years and that thousands of prisoners had been taken when Mr. Laurens was captured, and he had a right to suppose that he was simply a prisoner of war, and one can imagine his surprise when he was taken to England and placed in close confinement in the Tower of London, as a prisoner of state.

The mind will readily suggest the many persons who have occupied that famous, historic national prison, during the long period of the upbuilding of the English constitution, and the fixing of limitations on the power of despotism.

Kings, queens, princess of the blood, patriotic lovers of mankind and of their country, pious men, men who had sought to worship God, men who had sought to do good to the world, and men who had sought to do good to the world, and men who had sought to do good to the world.

Indeed it is difficult to find any important matter transacted in Europe in those interesting days without seeing the hand of our mercurial patriot, and his great influence on the course of events.

Franklin's Letter.

Indeed it is difficult to find any important matter transacted in Europe in those interesting days without seeing the hand of our mercurial patriot, and his great influence on the course of events.

Dr. Franklin was staying in France, and in the closest possible touch with the affairs of his country and its citizens in Europe, and upon being informed of the capture of Mr. Laurens, he immediately wrote a letter to the minister of the Netherlands, and in that letter he expressed his sympathy for the patriot, and his confidence in the success of the revolution.

OBCEY THE ORDER OF COURT

County Commissioners Award the Job Printing Contract and Approve Contract of Bidder.

The contract with the Festerer company for county printing during 1899 was approved by the Board of County Commissioners in accordance with the order of a mass session of the district court some time ago.

On the recommendation of the finance committee, the suit against William Coburn for excess fees without the benefit of a received during his term as sheriff was ordered dismissed. This was on the advice of Attorney Ferguson, who was retained as special counsel in the case, and who contended that the county has no chance to win the suit.

A request that a member of the board be designated to prepare a paper on "Good Roads" to be delivered at the Good Roads convention at Lincoln, was placed on file, as none of the commissioners seemed to care to undertake the job.

The resolution introduced by Hofstad at the previous meeting, by which the employment of an Auditor of Accounts for sixty days was authorized, was withdrawn with the explanation that arrangements have been made by which the work can be done with the regular office force.

The appropriation which contained an item of $45 for office rent for the county attorney, Harle called attention to the fact that the resolution adopted by the board contemplated an expenditure of only $35 for this purpose, and the item was taken to the finance committee.

The only reference to the charges made against Albyn Frank at a previous meeting, was a communication from Frank, in which he explained that an item of $20 in his favor for service as an insanity commissioner had been inserted by mistake and was consequently withdrawn. The communication was referred to committee of the whole.

STORY OF THE STARRY FLAG

Symbols of Bidding Nationhood Reflected in Its Banners.

BIRTH OF THE RED, WHITE AND BLUE

Origin and Traditions of the First Truly Revolutionary Meeting of the Daughters of the Revolution.

The Star Spangled Banner is distinctly the emblem of a united and liberty-loving people. History is silent as to its origin and traditions as to the probable source from which the design was drawn or the colors suggested as conflicting and unsatisfactory.

When all the circumstances of the times are considered it seems reasonable to believe that our starry flag was evolved from England's red standard when the events of the period proved the necessity of the union of the states and kindled the desire for freedom in the hearts of the colonists.

The early English explorers and the Mayflower pilgrims brought with them the flag of England, a red cross on a white field.

The Dutch colony on Manhattan Island was established under the Dutch East India colors, which were three horizontal stripes of orange, white and blue. In 1650 the orange was changed to red and the striped red, white and blue flag of the Dutch waved over New Amsterdam until 1654, when the English took possession, raised the Union Jack and changed the name New Amsterdam to New York.

Symbols of Revolt.

England's flag waved over the American colonies until 1765, when liberty poles were erected and flags of various colors and designs began to be displayed by the unhappy colonists. The King's colors were frequently inscribed with the words "No Taxation without Consent," and the words "The Union of the Colonies and the Measures of the Congress" and "George III. and the Liberties of America."

The differences between the mother country and the colonies increased with time, and the colonies increased with time, and the colonies increased with time.

The necessity of the union of the thirteen states for mutual protection was constantly uppermost in the public mind, and receiving a flag signifying defiance, was represented as having thirteen rattles, and another design was thirteen mailed hands grasping an endless chain of thirteen links, and yet another, thirteen arrows in the shafts of an eagle.

A Hunker Bill Flag.

A flag carried at the battle of Bunker Hill had a blue field with one corner quartered by the red cross of St. George, in one section of which was a pine tree, and tradition says that a flag bearing the words, "Come if You Dare" was displayed by the hardy continentalists during the battle.

A standard presented to the Philadelphia troop of Light Horse in 1775 is still in existence. It is made of yellow silk and is valued as being the earliest design showing thirteen stripes. Below the stripes is the central design, which includes a knot with thirteen floating ends, is the motto "For These We Strive." The upper corner near the staff has thirteen blue and silver stripes.

Washington's flag was a blue field, consisting of thirteen stars, and thirteen stripes, was organized in 1776. The uniform of this guard was blue with white facings or trimmings. The flag of the corps is preserved in the museum of Alexandria, Va. It is white silk. The design is a guard holding a horse by the reins and receiving a flag from the Goddess of Liberty. At the feet of the Goddess is a shield which shows thirteen stripes and a field of stars. An eagle stands near the shield.

The National Flag.

A national flag was finally deemed necessary and a committee was appointed to consider the matter.

The members of the committee were Benjamin Franklin, Benjamin Harrison and Thomas Lynch, Jr. As the result of their conference a striped flag was designed to be used at Cambridge, Mass., January 2, 1776.

As the colonists had not as yet entertained the idea of absolute severance from England the new flag was merely the British union Jack with thirteen stars on the blue field, the thirteen stripes alternate red and white, indicating the union of the American colonies. The crosses of St. George and St. Andrew, the emblem of English sovereignty, remained unchanged in the upper corner next to the staff. Most of the colored banners bore the words "We Appeal to Heaven," but the motto could not be read at a distance and were unsatisfactory. Thus it was only a matter of time when the yoke of British tyranny was thrown off and justice had been ignored by an earthly king.

Design Adopted by Congress.

It was not until almost a year after the Declaration of Independence that the American congress met on the 14th day of June, 1776, and resolved, "That the flag of the thirteen United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation."

Mrs. Elizabeth Ross of Philadelphia was the government's first flag maker.

The first military occasion on which the stars and stripes were displayed was at Fort Stanwix, N. Y., August 2, 1777. It was made of white shirting and pieces of red cloth with a blue union made from oak boughs which Colonel Abraham Swartwout of Dutchess county, New York.

It is pleasant to know that the colored sailor forth under this happily improved flag and captured five of the enemy's colors, which were then hoisted on the ship, the first salute ever fired for the stars and stripes by a foreign naval power on the 14th day of February, 1778.

The famous victory as captain of the Bon Home Richard was gained under the same flag, which is still in existence and is a good state of preservation. It was presented to the Smithsonian institute last December by Mrs. Stafford, a daughter-in-law of James Bayard Stafford, the middleman who lapped overboard and recovered the flag when it was shot from the mast during the battle.

Significance of the Colors.

The red of our flag denotes courage, the blue, purity and peace, the blue, vigilance, perseverance and justice. The stars on the white field signify "In God is Our Trust." The red stripes are tokens of defiance to the nation's enemies, and with the white ones symbolize the original thirteen colonies that by their united effort made America free.

Father Time has wrought changes in most of the banners of the nations of the world since the stars and stripes became our national emblem. Today our flag is older than those of Great Britain, Spain, France, Portugal, Germany, Italy, Sweden, China, Japan or any of the South American countries.

The Star Spangled banner has been the harbinger of law and liberty, peace and prosperity, education and enlightenment, to the people of the United States that honor it as the emblem of their union. Long may it wave.

THE GRIP EPIDEMIC

Special Use of Hot Groggs

BY

Dr. CYRUS EDSON of New York Health Dept. and Dr. LIBERMANN Surgeon General of the French Army.

H. Libermann, M. D., surgeon general of the French army, in an article on "La Grippe" (influenza), recommends the following hot grog: "One-third goblet of Vin Mariani, with two-thirds boiling water, cloves and cinnamon, and with or without sugar, makes a grog of exquisite flavor, which produces immediate beneficial effect in severe cases of cold, attended by convulsive coughing and depression. It is best taken at bed time. In the grip epidemic in France it was the tonic absolutely relied upon, and has received frequent deserved mention in the Medical Press. It has been shown that patients recover very slowly. There is much general weakness and lassitude favorably calling for something in nature of a tonic stimulant, and it has been found that Mariani wine is unequalled for such cases."

Dr. Cyrus Edson of the New York Health Department has made a careful study of the subject in his book on "La Grippe," published by Appleton & Co. On page 39 he writes of Vin Mariani and calls special attention to it in the form of a hot grog. In speaking of the complete prostration accompanied by the depression caused by the disease, and also during entire convalescence, his preference for a tonic stimulant is a hot grog of Vin Mariani. He says it is excellent for the purpose intended, and recommends its use favorably calling for something in nature of a tonic stimulant, and it has been found that Mariani wine is unequalled for such cases."

A book with further explicit details will be sent by Mariani & Co., 62 West 15th St., New York, to any one who will write requesting same. It is certainly well worth writing for.

In addition to the able authorities quoted, the book offered contains many more similar and most convincing endorsements, thus proving it the most reliable of all known products of this character.
