Burlington's No. 1 to Run by Way of Plattsmouth.

CARD GOES INTO EFFECT NEXT SUNDAY

Explanation that a Train Coming Into Omnha at So Early a Moraing Hour Can Do No Local Business.

As already forecasted in The Bee, the Burlington will make a radical change in the running time of some of its trains next Sunday. This has been in contemplation for several weeks, and twice was announced to become effective and afterward withdrawn. This time it will be a go. The principal change will be in the train which from a legendary standpoint has carried no other name than that of "The Burlington No. 1." It is the train which now arrives in Omaha and from the east at a few minutes before not come to this city at all.

Members of the execu-tive committee replied to the message, in-The argument for the defense was made by attorneys who represented several saloon men who had similar cases before the ourt. It was agreed between the opposing sides that all cases having practically the same testimony as that involved in the Long entered the saloon on Sunday afternoon and purchased two glasses of beer and had seen another man buy two bottles of beer, was

The counsel for the defense argued tha to infraction would have been committed had not these officers entered the place, and that it was impossible under the law to hold the defendant. They cited numerous auhorities in other states in which detectives and other officers of the law had been held for complicity in crimes or the defendants had been discharged because they had been lecoyed into committing a crime by the officers, to support them in their premise.

Miller Makes Comparisons.

City Prosecutor Miller insisted that under he statutes of Nebraska, men who buy or drink beer on Sunday break no law and that in entering the saloon for the purchase of making a good case against the saloon man, the officers violated no statute when they drank. He considered it a quasi crime, ye there was nothing to justify such a definition of the act. He referred to the case wherein a Lincoln detective acted as a conspirator for the robbery of the state treas ury several years ago and shot one of the thieves when he entered the place. He was indicted for murder. This case could not be used as a comparison he said as in it the the Long case he argued that the officers let the rest fly away. ound the saloon open and under their instructions entered for the purpose of securing absolute evidence for the conviction of the proprietor. He insisted that there was no comparison between such a case and the 5:46 p. m., arriving Chicago at 6.25 n. m. and arriving Omaha 8:20 a. m. You are earnestly requested should be sent to procure evidence in such reprehensible manner. He believed they had been ordered to enter the saloon and drink, therefore to act as decoys. "Supposing," he said, "these twenty offiers detailed to watch the saloons on Sunday and keep them closed should find it necessary to enter all of them and take a glass of beer in order that they would have a good case, what would be their condition when they got through?
