Condition of the Injured.

There was no time when it would have been possible for the firemen to have saved the women who jumped from the windows on the Screnteenth street side of the building, as when the fitemen got upon the ground all of the injured were either lying upon the sidewalk or had been carried to the improvised hospitals near at hand.

Three women who in some way had mannged to find their way through the lodge rooms and had reached the fire escape on the north end of the building, were rescued by the firemen. None of them were burned, but they were suffering from nervous prostration as a result of fright. They were able, however, to go to their homes unescoried.
