The marriage of Miss Mae Le Vere Bartlett to Mr. Charles L. Dundey was solemnized on Monday afternoon at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Bartlett, in the presence of near relatives and a few intimate friends of the contracting parties only. The officiating minister was Rev. T. J. Mackay. The house was profusely decorated with bridesmaid and American Beauty roses, carnations, violets and palma. The bride looked very handsome in her wedding toilet, which consisted of the bridal gown, veil and orange blossoms worn by her mother. The ceremony was followed by a wedding repast, immediately after which Mr. and Mrs. Dundey left for the Pacific coast, where they will spend their honeymoon.

Mention was made last Sunday of the se lection of Miss Ruth Phillippi by her classmates at Evanston to be managing editor of a paper to be published at the college It seems the "coeds" of the university are to issue a woman's edition of the college paper, which will make its appearance this week. It will be something new in the history of that institution. All the members of the editorial staff, aside from Miss Phillippl, are residents of Evanston. The paper will contain sketches of life at Woman's hall, a history of Woman's college and special articles by Mrs. Emily Huntington Miller and Dean Norris.

Halstead-Lane.

The friends of Miss Edith L. Lane of 72 Bleecker street, this city, are greatly surprised over the announcement of her wedding to Mr. Fred I. Halstead of Omaha. Mr. Halstead was engaged in business in Omaha, and he came east last year on a visit. While here he fell in love with Mise Lane, and they were married in New York on November 10.
