SEARCH MADE FOR CONTRABAND OF WAR

Prisoner for Six Weeks Released by Natives-Intrenchments of Samoans Well Made.

After the cessation of hostilities a detachment of British soldiers visited the battiefield of Vailima, where they recovered an American machine gun that had been captured by the rebels. The rebel forts at Lateppa and Vailima were two miles long and of great strength, being reinforced by trenches and rifle-pits. It was found that several rebels had died in the trenches from the shock of bursting shells, but with- I holding of this court." Mr. Kensit then beout having been wounded.

in the House of Commons today as to an order for the Goktick viaduct in Burmah to an American firm, and why British manufacturers had not been asked to make tender, the secretary of state for India Lord George Hamilton, replied that the Indian government had nothing to do with the contract. It was given, he said, by the Burmah Railways company, which invited six English and two American firms to make a tender. Four of the former refused to bid and the most favorable English tender received required three years for completion of the work at a cost of £116,000, while the best American tender proposed to complete the work in one year at a cost of £60,125. Eloquent Tributes Are Paid to the Memory of the Departed Brother by Prominent Members of

Funeral services for William R. Bowen, wenty-six years the grand secretary of the grand lodge of Masons in this state, were held at Masonic temple yesterday afternoor and several hundred members of the order from different sections of Nebraska were present to add their final testimony of regard for the brother with whom they had served so many years. The services were almos entirely under the supervision of the Masons Rev. T. J. Mackay of All Saints' Episcopai church, himself a Mason of high degree, was the officiating clergyman and spoke words of encouragement and hope to those who had been bereft. The Masonic service was in charge of Capitol lodge No. 2, in which Mr. Bowen held his membership in the baste work of all Masonry, assisted by the grand lodge of Nebraska and Mount Calvary commandery, Knights Templar, J. Her Strange Story Entertains Judge Gordon in the Vagrancy Case of W. L. Davis.

When the trial of W. L. Davis, accused of vagrancy, took place yesterday afternoon Judge Gordon listened to as strange a story as he has heard in a long time. The only witness examined was Mabel Hopkins of 4037 Decatur street, who testified that she met Davis last summer in a park and he asked her to marry him. She declined because she was already married. To his urgent plea to accompany him to Denver, however, she did not turn a deaf ear. She packed her valuables and they started out. At Fremont Davis said they could travel more reasonably if she would don some of his wearing apparel and she did so. As a boy she was quite a success and they managed to get to Denver without the loss of time and at very little expense. In Denver badly burned and an engineer who went to Davis induced her to work in a dance hall. She stood it three nights, but it was too tough and she gave it up. Afterward they went to Victor, where she tried two nights in a dance hall. A friend of her family came along and recognized her. A scolding followed. She turned repentant, the hard life she had led aiding in opening her eyes, and when the friend supplied her with clothing, in which she was lacking, she left Davis and came home.

This was not more than three weeks ago She found that her husband had obtained a divorce during her absence, so she must shift for herself. She obtained work in a restaurant, but had not been there long before Davis reappeared. His arrest followed on the ground that he was a suspiclous character. Judge Gordon, however, of the Utah commission of the Tra dismissed the case, the city prosecutor sidismissed the case, the city prosecutor silently acquiescing.

The Illustrations given of "Quo Vadis" and the magnificent lecture of Mr. Reilly make a combination it would be hard to excel. Without his lecture the pictures in themselves would furnish an excellent entertainment for an evening. With his lecture one is given enough food for thought to occupy him for some time. From the opening illustrations of the famous book the interest is intense. One feels that he cannot wait for the illustration of the particular portion of "Quo Vadis" to which the speaker is referring. From the meeting of Lygia and her lover to the erucifixion of the Christians the attention Spain. of the audience is intensified with each successive illustration. The departure of Nero and his innumerable carayan of courtiers, claves and wild beasts, his feasts at which each drank himself into unconsciousness, and the return to see the city of Rome aflame, fired the imagination of the auditors as the story was recited. Nero posing at the entrance to the eternal city, waiting for the inspired god to fill his enfeebled mind with words appropriate to the occasion finds himself cursed by the rabble, which threatens to attack the guard that surrounds his august door of the Christians and Nero promises the most extreme punishment. The feeding of the Christians to the lions and their impalement upon crosses furnished a rich heme for the speaker and excellent views of these events were given. The most exciting of the contests depicted in the arena is the struggle between Ursus, the glant Lygian, and the maddened bull, to whose horns is strapped the naked form of Lygia, the barbarian's queen. His muscular form eems to gain in strength as one gazes at the struggle and its result is awaited with feverish interest. The departure of Peter from Rome and his meeting with Christ is given. The "quo vadis, domine," of the aged apostle is fittingly illustrated. Nero passed as the whirlwind and left destruction and suffering in his path, but near the scene of the Savior's appearance to Peter a little chapel stands today bearing the words of the apostle, "Quo vadis, domine?"

"April's Tear is Answered by a Blossom."

Just as surely as blossoms follow the Spring rains does the bloom of good health, vigor and strength follow taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. It thoroughly cleanses the blood of Winter's accumulation of impurities, and prepares the whole system for the beauty of glorious Summer. After taking a course of Hood's Sarsaparilla as a Spring Medicine you will eat well and sleep well, because you will be well.

After the Graders, City Attorney Montgomery has been instructed to draft an ordinance providing for the cleaning of streets after graders. The intent of the ordinance is to compel all graders to deposit the sum of $50 with 'he city tressurer as a guarantee that the streets over which dirt is hauled will be properly cleaned after the work is completed. Th city engineer is to inspect the streets before an order will be given to the treasurer to refund the deposit. It is expected in this way to keep the streets in a much better condition and also to save the taxpayers money which is now spent in cleaning up after graders.
