DEGREE IN INJUNCTION SUIT. Is Less Favorable to Board of Education Than the Ruling Was.

The decree in the injunction suit of Slack Peterson against the Independent School District of Council Bluffs was received yesterday morning from Judge Green for entry of record in the district court. The decree is even more unfavorable to the board of education than was anticipated by the ruling previously received. It orders that a temporary restraining order issue enjoining the defendants from paying for the site of the new high school building, or any work done thereon until the determination of the appeal now pending before the Hon. H. W. Sawyer, county superintendent of Pottawattamie county, Iowa, and for thirty days thereafter; and in case of appeal from his decision within ten days from the rendition thereof to the state superintendent of public instruction, until the said appeal will have been finally determined.

The law provides that either party dissatisfied with the ruling of the county superintendent has thirty days in which to appeal to the state superintendent, but by Judge Green's ruling the injunction only holds good till the matter is finally disposed of by the state superintendent, if the plaintiff appeal within ten days after the county superintendent shall have rendered his decision. The attorneys in the case are somewhat at a loss to fully understand the meaning of the order, as it will be seen that in one place Judge Green says the injunction shall remain in force for thirty days after the county superintendent shall have rendered his decision, and in the very next line says in case of an appeal from the ruling of the county superintendent within ten days from the rendition thereof the injunction shall remain in force until the matter is decided by the state superintendent.

In conformity with the ruling the decree dissolves the injunction restraining the board from paying for the site out of the school house fund. It also gives the board permission to move for an additional cost bond as soon as the sale of the bonds is completed. This President Sims of the board said yesterday, would be done, the very moment the sale of the bonds is completed. The board will apply for an order requiring the amount so put up to be in good-sized amount so that in the event of the board winning the case it may have something to fall back upon to recoup it for the expense it has been put to by the

KAVANAUGH SKIPS THE TOWN

Takes with Him a Team Belonging to Livervyman Smith.

SMOOTH STRANGER GETS IN HIS GRAFT Bought the Pacific Hotel, But Falls to Pay the Cash, and Deserts His Alleged Wife and Much Wanted Man.

Although J. E. Kavanaugh's physical disability compels him to go through life with but one leg he appears to be able to travel just as fast as a man with two sound limbs. At present Mr. Kavanaugh is a much wanted man by the police and W. J. Smith, who owns a livery barn on Scott street. Kavanaugh's failure to return at the agreed time with a buggy and a team belonging to Smith is the reason why the police are anxious to secure some trace of him.

Last Saturday Kavanaugh, accompanied by a woman whom he represented to be his wife, registered at the Pacific hotel. He at once entered into negotiations with Landlord Messmore for the purchase of the hotel, as he claimed to be looking for some location to go into business. He displayed a big, fat roll of bills and his talk indicated that he was possessed of a considerable amount of money. The only thing that remained to do was the payment by Kavanaugh of the money. This he was to do Thursday, but Messmore still has the hotel on his hands and Kavanaugh's alleged wife, Tuesday morning, Kavanaugh told Messmore that he was going a short distance into Nebraska to fetch a niece, who was a first-class cook and whom he wished to place in charge of the kitchen at the hotel. He went to Livervyman Smith and hired a buggy and double team, saying he would be back Wednesday. The story he told of his purchase of the hotel and the roll of bills he took care to display satisfied Smith that he was hiring a rig to a perfectly responsible party, but Smith has since learned to his regret that Kavanaugh's appearance is anything but deceiving.

When Kavanaugh failed to return at the stipulated time Smith became anxious and notified the police. Information was received that the missing man and team had been seen at Plattsmouth and Smith set out for there. He returned yesterday morning, but Kavanaugh and the team are still, as far as he knows, gone south.

Swim in the River. Smith learned that Kavanaugh took desperate chances in crossing the Platte. The river is much swollen and the ferryman at first refused to take the team and man. However, he was insisted and the ferryman finally agreed to carry him across at his own risk. When within about 100 yards from the opposite shore the ferryboat became loosened from the cable and commenced to drift down with the stream. Kavanaugh lowered the top of the buggy and jumping up on the seat lashed the horses until they sprang from the boat into the river. The horses, guided by Kavanaugh, swam to the shore. When he reached Plattsmouth Kavanaugh put the top on the barn for three hours and then left town in the direction of Nebraska City.

On leaving Plattsmouth Kavanaugh was accompanied by a widow named Band. This information Smith secured from the woman's year-old son, who had been living with her in Plattsmouth on several previous occasions and had become very intimate with the widow Band.

At Nebraska City it was learned that Kavanaugh and the woman drove through the city on Monday before noon, but did not stop. From there all trace of them has been lost.

The woman, who registered at the hotel here as his wife, admitted to the police yesterday that she was not married to Kavanaugh and that she had only been living with him a couple of weeks. She claims to know nothing about the man. The suspicion of the police that the roll of bills displayed by Kavanaugh was a flash one was strengthened when it became known yesterday that he had borrowed $5,000 from one of the employes at the hotel. Kavanaugh appeared to be about 45 years of age and looked like a plain business man. The police think he is a "graffler" of the first water. Cards containing his identification and the names were sent broadcast over the country yesterday.
