CITY WILL NOW PROPOSE

Council to Present the Demands of the People to the Roads.

SOME DISPUTED POINTS AGREED UPON

Council Announces that It Has Decided to Close Seventeenth Street and the Roads Are Instructed to Insist.

The city council and the attorneys for the Burlington and Union Pacific roads came down to the actual discussion of specific provisions of an agreement yesterday afternoon. The conference lasted about two hours at the end of the council went into executive session to draw up the proposition of the city to the roads, which was to embody, as far as possible, the common ground reached in the afternoon's deliberations. In all probability this proposition will be reduced to its final form this morning and will be immediately transmitted to the heads of the roads.

Councilman Beechler presided over the meeting. City Attorney Connell made the suggestion that the committee begin according to the lay of the land, taking up first the difficult Sixth street and working west. Attorney Cornish, for Lininger & McCull, asked that Sixth street be left in abeyance until the Union Pacific answered their proposition for the opening of a road in place of Sixth street. It was agreed that Sixth street should be left out of the afternoon's discussion.

The subway at Seventh street and the viaducts at Tenth and Eleventh and the subways at Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets were passed.

The paragraph relating to the Sixteenth street viaduct, stating that it should be constructed according to the city engineer's plans, was passed with the understanding that it should be made to include the time limit, the end of the current year.

When the Twenty-fourth street viaduct was mentioned, as a possibility of the most recent years, members of the South Side Improvement club asked that the roads be required either to build a suitable viaduct on that street at once, or to open the street. City Attorney Connell, speaking as an interested property owner, said that it would be much better for the residents of that portion of the city to wait a reasonable time and get a substantial viaduct than to insist on immediate action and get a wooden viaduct, which would stand for a number of years, or to insist on the building of the subway at Bancroft street and have the viaduct delayed.

South Side Divided.
The south side was not entirely united in what the streets should be made in the manner in which they would get in. One of the delegates insisted that there must be an immediate opening across or under the tracks on Twenty-fourth street. He would be willing to wait a year for the viaduct, but he insisted that the roads be made to agree at that time. Another resident of the district across the tracks said that the proposition for the building of a viaduct in a year and a half seemed to be a fair one, and that it should be satisfactory to the south side.

General Manderson reminded the south side that he and Judge Baldwin were simply the representatives of their chiefs, and that these chiefs were in a position to know the capabilities of the roads in the way of expenditures for viaducts. The council had agreed to reduce the time to a year and one-half tentatively, their action being subject to review.

In regard to a viaduct on Boulevard street the city attorney said that according to the report of the engineer, the viaduct on the north side of the road Wednesday night it meant that the viaduct would be built as soon as the Park board had put the street in passable shape. There was no opposition to this understanding.

Upon the reading of the paragraph relating to the ordinance against the obstruction of streets with cars, Judge Baldwin made the unqualified statement that the Union Pacific did not desire the repeal of the ordinance. All his road had intended to ask was that the portion of the ordinance requiring it to maintain the forty-foot strip near the bridge as a road be repealed. It was unfortunate, the judge said, that the title, by which the ordinance had been mentioned did not indicate its real nature.

The reading of the ordinance was examined and found to mention the ordinance, and not simply a part of it. But with the understanding that the regulation regarding the blocking of streets was not to be touched this portion of the agreement was passed.

The council reached the last agreement to insist on the exclusion of the clause promising on the part of the city that no effort would ever be made to reopen Fifteenth street. While the street was already closed and would probably remain so, nevertheless the councilmen were of the opinion that the clause had no proper place in the agreement.

The clause agreeing that the city should never seek to reopen any streets between Seventeenth and Twentieth, between Twentieth and Twenty-fourth, Twenty-fourth and Bancroft and Bancroft and Boulevard, was not discussed at length.

City Attorney Connell stated that the council had agreed not to consent to the closing of Martha street until the completion of the subway at Bancroft street. There was no objection from the roads. Judge Baldwin took occasion to state here that the present management of the Union Pacific intended to fulfill every promise made, and that while he appreciated the feelings of the citizens toward the former management they were not to be so treated any longer. This statement called forth applause.

Seventeenth Street Troublesome.
Little progress toward a satisfactory agreement as to the closing of Seventeenth street was made. Mr. Stult said that the council had decided to refuse to close it, and Judge Baldwin said that his road would positively insist that the proposal of the roads in regard to this point be agreed to, and maintained that the same did not ask for the closing of Seventeenth, but simply provided that it should be closed when the roads had shown to the satisfaction of the council that they had made a satisfactory agreement with the property owners. He claimed that the city was not asked to give up anything.

VALUE OF RUSSIAN FOXSKIN

Disputed Cost of Stolen Coat Is Settled by an Experienced Furrier.

That values vary in different countries has been demonstrated by the several estimates placed upon a Russian foxskin coat owned by Henry Stern, 708 North Sixteenth street. It was stolen from a line in the back yard on the evening of March 31. John Dellbridge and John Sutton were arrested and tried on the charge of grand larceny. The owner and three other persons were on the stand and each placed the value at $100, the original purchaser claiming that it cost a century note in Russia, where it was bought. It was on this testimony that the court held the theft to be grand larceny, the value of the stolen goods being over $50. In the upper court Dellbridge and Sutton were acquitted, the state being unable to produce sufficient evidence to convince the jury of their guilt. A few days ago both were arrested on suspicion and it was during their incarceration at this time that a tip was received which led to the arrest of Ben Wittig, who sold the coat to a saloon-keeper named Joseph Weishartinger for $235. Fearing that he might slip up on the value of the coat if Wittig were accused of grand larceny, Deputy County Attorney Hestley sent the coat to Shugart, the furrier, for the purpose of learning its true value. Mr. Shugart said the coat ought not to cost more than $5.50 in any market.

This valuation places a different phase on the case entirely. Now a charge of petty larceny will be placed against Wittig and the police judge will dispose of him. The case against Dellbridge and Sutton probably cost the county $250, and had they been sent to the penitentiary on the testimony of the four witnesses who estimated the value of the cloak at $100 it would have been an increased expense to the state.

PHOTOGRAPH FROM MALOLOS

Picture of the Boys of Company L, Reached the City.

Cadet Taylor is in receipt of a photograph of Company L, taken at Malolos, in the Philippines, early in May. The picture shows the boys all in a group, some lying down and others standing, with a tropical forest for a background. In nearly every instance the Omaha boys have grown whiskers, giving them an appearance hardly recognizable by their friends. Mr. Taylor will have the picture enlarged.

Registered package cards that have made the trip from Omaha to the Philippines and return have been received by Mr. Taylor. These cards, of which there are two, left the Omaha postoffice April 11 and reached Manila May 12, starting on their return trip two days later. The stamp of the Manila postoffice of San Francisco also, owing to the fact that it is a station of the latter office.

Glorious News.
Comes from Dr. D. D. Carille of Washita, I. T. He writes: "Four bottles of Electric Bitters has cured Mrs. Brewer of scrofula, which had caused her great suffering for years. This shows what thousands have proved—that Electric Bitters is the best blood purifier known. It's the supreme remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. Only 50 cents. Sold by Kuhn & Co., druggists. Guaranteed.

How to Cure a Sprain.
Last fall I sprained my left hip while handling some heavy boxes. The doctor I called on said at first it was a slight strain and would soon be well, but it grew worse and the doctor then said I had rheumatism. It continued to grow worse and I could hardly get around to work. I went to a drug store and the druggist recommended me to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I tried it and one-half of a 50-cent bottle cured me entirely. I now recommend it to all my friends.—F. A. Babcock, Erie, Pa.

The following building permits have been issued by the city building inspector:

Given a Slight Scare.
After reading reports of death-dealing wind storms the people of Omaha felt a trifle uneasy when a threatening looking cloud formed off to the north, apparently just above Florence at noon yesterday. Close to the horizon this cloud took on a greenish hue, up to the middle it was a pale blue, while above it was a steel gray. Still above this was a bank of light-colored clouds that rolled and loosed like ships in a storm. For a few minutes this storm
