Reservoir Act is Being Used by Men for Taking Whole Townships.

THEY GOBBLE UP THE LAND

COURSE DISCOURAGES ACTUAL SETTLERS

Private Land is So Surrounded by Large Claims as to Make It Almost Unsalable to Other Partles.

C. J. Lane, assistant general freight agent for the Union Pacific, has returned from the leading from the bridge to the new depot. northwest after a trip extending over ten The Iron work for this structure was ordays. He says the most notable thing to dored months ago and has not yet arrived, attract his attention while away was the with no date fixed when it might be exrush for land in western Nebraska under pected. The laying of tracks over the new the reservoir act. Speaking of this matter roadbed at that point is progressing rapidly and if the iron is not here when the subway he said:

"The people out there are simply falling is reached, which is not now deemed poss! over themselves to take up land under that ble, timbers must be used as a temporary law. According to the provisions of the act makeshift. There is a large force of men engaged in constructing the tracks for the the party filing takes a quarter section. making a declaration that he will construct new union depot, but the character of the a reservoir upon it inside of two years. work is such that progress seems to be slow to one not familiar with what is being done. There is nothing in the act defining what shall constitute a reservoir. It may mean an artificial lake covering the 160 acres, or it may mean the little hole under the drippings of the pump up by the house. This point may have to be interpreted by the

"One man whom I know in the western part of the state has filed upon two solid townships of land and another has filed upon 29,000 acres. The filings in nearly all cases cover parts of the railroad land. They cannot hold this, but by taking all the land around it they expect to keep settlers away from it and thereby indirectly give them possession so long as they want to use it.

"There appears to be something wrong about this law. There is a great deal of complaint on the part of others about the manner in which this land is being gobbled up. The taking of the land in this manner will do the country no good. What is needed for that section, and what the rallroads out there want to see is the land occupied by actual settlers, who will farm a little and give their attention to stock raising. That will build up the state and make business for us. The way the land is being taken up will not accomplish this purpose.' A man from the western part of the state, who is engaged in the stock business on a small scale, talking to this same point, said:

'In this reservoir act the old-time range cattle and sheep raisers finds a new lease of life. During late years they have been forced to recede before the settlers and the men with small herds. Under this law they have all their employes and friends file upon hand and it gives them possession for two years at little if any expense. Other land which does not belong to the government is so completely surrounded by these big claims ing a chairman of the Western Passenger that settlers cannot be induced to go upon it. Congress ought to amend the law at once or repeal it. A cash deposit at the land office at the time of the filings are made, returnable to the claimant when the conditions of the law are complied with, might remedy the matter."

Rushing for Texas Traffic.

Southwestern traffic agents are just now giving their attention to a new departure by the St. Paul road in establishing commercial agents at important Texas points. For a long time, it is said, it has been the custom for roads handling the Texas busness to discourage the establishing of agencies in that state by outside lines, and in turn for such action on the part of the outsiders they have been given this traffic at connecting points. The purpose of this system was to better maintain rates by not having these outside competitors in the field. The St. Paul, however, has determined to
