In addition to the above we place on sale more different styles and kinds of ladies' and men's, misses', child's and boys' new summer black and tan shoes, slippers and oxfords than any two shoe stores in the west put together. It is almost impossible to ask for a style or grade of shoe we have not got and what is still better—we have it to sell for very much less money than you could get it elsewhere. We employ more shoe salesmen than any three stores in Omaha put together. That's because we have so much business and need them to wait on our customers. People like the way we sell shoes.

REPORT OF CITY LIBRARIAN

Circulation of Books for the Year Just Closed Shows Decrease.
SCHOOL STATION PLAN PROVES A SUCCESS
Good Start Made Toward a Museum—Lecture and Study Rooms in Almost Constant Use.

days during the year. The total circulation for home reading was 183,698 books loaned, of which more than a third went to children. The daily average circulation reached the highest point in March of 1899, and the lowest point in June, 1898. The highest number of books issued in one day reached 2,067, on March 18, 1899. Only one book was lost during the entire year.
The plan of sending books to the city school buildings was adopted in December. During the six months closing May 31 the circulation through the schools was 8,235. The work was in the nature of an experiment this year, but has been found by the library authorities to be entirely satisfactory and will in all probability be kept up during the coming year. The plan adopted was to issue to each child a regular library card and the result has been that many of the pupils who formed the habit of reading by getting the books at school are continuing the use of their cards this summer.
Teachers in the High School have been allowed to draw five books at a time for preparation for their school work and grade teachers have been allowed to draw two. Leaders of clubs and similar classes of instruction have been allowed to draw a reasonable number of books for the same purpose.

The total circulation in the children's department has been 52,825 and the daily average was 175. The children, like the adults, have drawn fewer books during the year just closed than during any of several previous years. Juvenile fiction, of course, predominated among the subjects called for by the children, with history a distant second. One-fourth of 1 per cent of the books called for were upon philosophical subjects.
The reference department was open 251 days. The total attendance during the year was 23,461. An average of fifty-two books were consulted daily, besides forty brought from the stacks in the book room for use in the reference room. Thirty-four books have been secured for this department during the year as loans.
The study rooms have been used by the art department of the Woman's club, several High School classes and a number of classes studying particular subjects. The lecture room was in almost daily use during the winter months. Weekly meetings were held by the Omaha Philosophical society, classes in Egyptian, departments of the Woman's club and study classes, fortnightly meetings by the Council of Jewish Women and by an Omaha literary society and monthly meetings by the Technical club of Omaha. A course of six lectures on modern French literature was given by the teacher of French in the High School. Several requests for the use of the room had to be refused on account of conflicting engagements.

The Byron Reed room was open the entire year, with the exception of sixteen days, when repairs were being made. It was visited by 11,073 visitors and 1,649 books were used. The few donations to the museum which were put in the room at first have been removed and now the room contains only the Byron Reed collection.
The two east rooms on the third floor of the library building were occupied from October to June by the Western Art association, under permission granted by the library board.
The Transmississippi Exposition offered an opportunity to lay the foundation for a museum which the board did not neglect. The board and the committee appointed by the Woman's club for the purpose obtained from the exhibitors a large number of valuable donations, which gifts were supplemented by the loan by the government of a number of exhibition cases, to be returned on demand. The average daily attendance of these rooms has been eighty-five.

The report of the secretary of the board shows charges to the book account during the year, $5,747.65; to the building account, $3,492.82; to the salary account, $5,574.04; to the supply account, $564.45; and to the museum account, $663.54. The total expenditures of the year were $16,942.51.
RELIGIOUS.
Colonel Davis, successor to General Henry as governor of Porto Rico, is a Roman Catholic.
Senator Hoar owns a copy of the famous Aiken bible, which he inherited from his grandfather.
At the annual meeting of the German Baptist Brethren (Dunkards) at Roanoke, Va., there were 6,000 delegates present.
Since the pope issued his letter to the English people four years ago, 30,000 Anglicans have joined the Roman Catholic church.
The cornerstone of St. Joseph's cathedral, Roman Catholic, Salt Lake City, was laid last Sunday by Bishop Scanton. The building is to cost $75,000.
Boston is waging war on the church bonnet. Some other cities are willing to put up with the bonnet for the sake of having the wearer go to church.
Harriet Patterson, 11 years old, was arrested in New York last week for picking the pockets of worshippers at the Fourth Baptist church while they were kneeling in prayer.

Recently cannibals attacked a Presbyterian mission station in the New Hebrides, and killed and ate two missionaries from London. The cause was the continual sale of alcoholic liquors, which New Hebrides missionaries have been begging the British, the United States, the French and the Australian governments to prohibit.
The Christian Scientists of this country and Europe recently held their annual meeting at Boston, at which about 10,000 members were present. Two thousand five hundred and fifty new names were added to the roll and received into the church at the communion service, several of them being from England and Scotland and three from Australia. The organization reports 594 branch churches and 113 additional regularly established Sunday services in the United States, Canada, England, Scotland, France and Germany. The membership is estimated at 70,000, and the church attendance number about 300,000.
THE OLD-TIMERS.
Sidney Cooper, now 96 years old, has had four pictures on exhibition at the London academy this year.
James J. Cavanaugh of Watertown, Mass., 168 years old, is the oldest man in New England. He saw Napoleon when in Paris during the Hundred Days.

Mrs. Mary Clybourne was the oldest settler of all who attended the recent Chicago pioneers' banquet. She has lived in Chicago for seventy-six years.
Patrick Henry, a lineal descendant of his illustrious namesake, has just celebrated the sixtieth anniversary of his marriage. During all of those years he has lived in the same house in Lexington, Ky.
Henry L. Clinton, the New York lawyer, who died last Wednesday at the age of 89, was famous as a criminal lawyer. He it was who defended Richard Croker on the charge of murder. He also took a prominent part in the prosecution of "Boss" Tweed.
Richard W. Thompson, "Uncle Dick," of Indiana, who on Friday observed the 90th anniversary of his birth, served in congress with Lincoln, John Quincy Adams, Calhoun, Clay and Webster. He was born in the year that produced Darwin, Longfellow, Gladstone, Tenyson, Holmes and other great men, who are now all dead.
South Carolinians are going ahead with their plan to raise a fund for the rebuilding of General Wade Hampton's burned home, in spite of his published protest against it. But their aims are modest and they wish to erect only a comfortable home for their aged friend and leader. He is over 80 years old. The daughters of the Confederacy will furnish it.
