Pick McDonald as Candidate.

The local democrats who are opposed to the Jeffersonian club wing of the party have picked on Prof. McDonald, principal of the Minden High school, as their candidate for county superintendent. The indications daily grow stronger that the democratic convention to name a county ticket this year will be one of the warmest held for a long time in this county. The breach between the different factions in the Bourbon ranks grows wider day by day. The opposition to Prof. Sawyer, the present democratic incumbent of the office of county superintendent, comes from the fact that he is closely identified with Brooks Reed and the other silk stockingites who are alleged by the rank and file to be working the Jeffersonian club for their individual benefit and not in the interest of the party at large.

OBJECTS TO DIGGING DITCH

Attorney General Takes Measures to Restrain W. A. Smith.

AFRAID HE WILL DRAIN NOBLE'S LAKE

State Official Claims the Body of Water is Public Domain and Must Not Be Tampered With.

Milton R. Remley, attorney general of Iowa, commenced suit in the district court yesterday against W. A. Smith to restrain him from digging a ditch which the attorney general alleges is being constructed by Smith for the purpose of draining Noble Lake into the Missouri river.

The suit is brought in the name of the State of Iowa and the attorney general sets up the contention that Noble lake, which is half a mile wide and two miles long, situated in Rockford township, in this county, is public property and is of the waters of the state, used largely for the protection of fish by the state and by it is a pleasure resort for its citizens. The allegation is made that Smith is now engaged in digging a large ditch very near the southern part of the lake to the Missouri river with the intention of draining all the water from the lake and thus destroy and injure the property of the state in the same. It is further contended on the part of the state that the lake is a permanent body of water and has existed as such a great length of time.

Judge Smith, on the showing made, granted a temporary injunction restraining Smith from proceeding with the digging of the ditch complained of. Noble's lake is one of the popular fishing resorts in this section and considerable interest is attached to the suit. The recent rise of the Missouri river caused the water to flow into the river and most of the land between the river and the lake is at present under water, in some places being four feet deep.

Smith owns a large section of land lying west and south of the north end of the lake in this county, which is under water. He claims that the ditch which he is digging along the wagon road is not for the purpose of draining the lake but to draw off the water from his land. Owing to water backing up from the river the lake has overflowed beyond the meander line. Part of the lake crosses the boundary line into Harrison county and Smith's friends claim that the present action of the attorney general is instigated by certain residents on the Harrison county side of the lake, who wish to see the lake retain its present size at the expense of the owners of the land on the south side now under flood. According to Smith, some 500 or 600 acres of land since the high water have been flooded and now apparently form a portion of the lake.

COUNCIL KILLS MAYOR'S VETO.

Another Unexpected Turn Occurs in the Union Pacific Bridge Case.

At a special meeting of the city council last night Mayor Jennings presented his veto of the resolution granting the Union Pacific Railroad company permission to erect a new bridge over Indian creek at the junction of Fifth and Union avenues. The veto follows:

To the Honorable Members of the City Council of the City of Council Bluffs, Ia.—Gentlemen: Document No. 459, being a resolution granting permission to the Union Pacific Railroad company to construct a bridge over Indian Creek at the junction of Union avenue and Fifth avenue in this city, was presented to the council July 19, 1899, and motion made to adopt the same, resulting in a vote of four councilmen for and three against its adoption. By the provisions of said resolution the same was to be accepted by the railroad company and imposed certain duties and obligations to be performed by the railroad company. In my judgment said resolution if properly passed and accepted would have constituted a contract between the city and said railroad company, and under the statute would require for its passage a majority vote of all the members of the council. There being eight members and only four voting for the adoption of said resolution I declared the same lost. I still hold to this same ruling, but as certain doubts have arisen as to whether said ruling was in accordance with law, and as said resolution cannot become operative without the signature of the mayor unless such signature is withheld for a period of fourteen days after the action of the council on the same, it is deemed advisable to return to your honorable body said resolution without signature and approval for the reason stated above, and for the further reason that I do not approve of the adoption of said resolution as presented to the council because of the fact that the same provides for a clearance of fourteen feet south of and parallel with the north line of Fifth avenue, instead of ten feet. For these reasons I deem it advisable to return said resolution to your honorable body without my signature or approval.

As soon as the veto message had been read by the clerk Alderman Sayles objected to the irregularity of the proceedings as he termed it. He said the call for the meeting had not been read and he had received no official notice of the object for which the special meeting had been called. Alderman Brough followed in a like strain and stated it was his opinion that the meeting was not a legal one. Before the two aldermen had time to finish their complaints Alderman Casper took their breath away by moving that the resolution as originally introduced be passed over the mayor's veto. This move on the part of Casper, who, from the first, had been the strongest opponent of the resolution, created no small sensation, which was doubly increased when Alderman Christensen seconded Casper's motion. The motion on their part, however, was but a scheme to kill the resolution for when the vote was taken both Casper and Christensen voted against it, as did Aldermen Johnson and Shubert. The only two votes recorded in favor of the now famous resolution were those of Aldermen Brough and Sayles. Immediately following the announcement of the vote a motion to adjourn was carried in a hurry.

The question has been raised whether Mayor Jennings' veto improves the situation any. The attorneys for the Union Pacific still hold that the resolution was adopted at the meeting on July 10 and say that the railway company intends to go ahead and erect the bridge. They contend that under the law the mayor can veto a resolution embodying a contract or any resolution which would be inoperative or become ineffective without his signature of approval, but in this case they claim the resolution introduced at the meeting of July 10 did not embody any contract and the mayor's signature of approval was not necessary to make it effective. The attorneys for the Union Pacific holding this view of the matter leaves the situation practically unchanged, notwithstanding the mayor's veto and the failure to pass the resolution over his veto. They still contend that the resolution was passed at the former regular meeting and that, in pursuance of such adoption the company has the perfect right to go ahead and build its new bridge whenever it feels so disposed.

The first section was made up of nine tourist sleeping cars, a Pullman and a box car. The first train had 269 on board and the second 269. About half of the privates were recently enlisted men and but few of them had ever been west of Chicago.
