HER LONG TRAMP.

Annual Pilgrimage of a Woman Now Mary Hurley, 90 years old, who walked to this city from Bangor, Me., to see Lafayette when he was in this country, and who liked the experience so well that she has repeated this trip every year since, says the New York Tribune, was arraigned in the Morrisania police court on a technical charge of vagrancy. Until this year the woman has always succeeded in selling enough lead pencils to furnish food and lodging for herself. The aged traveler arrived in Tremont footsore and hungry. She made several vain attempts to dispose of her stock and finally she enjoyed herself so much that she took the trip the next year and each year there-The woman said that not once in all her journeys has she been molestsed. Once she said she stopped at the Reed homestead, bad. She had never found business so dull and had never sold so few pencils. New York state she declared to be a poor place and she said she would not like to be found dead in it. She did not want to be sick in the city, and for the first time since she had started her long walks she had to ask for shelter for a night. She would have slept in some field if the night had not been bad, as she has often, she said, slept by the side of the road in traveling. The clerks of the court got up a fund of $3.80, with which they bought her stock was the best place she had seen on her

How Most Political Caricaturists

Draw Cartoons of Public Men. "Very few of the well-known political caricaturists draw their cartoons of public men from photographs," said a local artist to the New Orleans Times-Democrat. "Of course, they have the photographs at hand, so they can refer to them if necessary, but as a general thing they prefer to trust to memory, and say that they get a better like-ness in that manner. This seems rather strange, but can be easily explained. When an artist sees a face, he carries away an impression of its most striking features, which are the ones necessary to exaggerate in drawing the caricature. In other words, he strikes directly at the root of the like-ness, while a photograph might confuse him with over-abundant detail. The way that some artists can distort features without making them unrecognizable is certainly very remarkable. Thomas Nast possesse1 that faculty to an extraordinary extent, and he had a very peculiar way of adding new faces to his mental portrait gallery. When sketch. After that he had the man forever, When Joe Keppler was alive he used to purpose of seeing statesmen whom he wanted to draw. He was very clever at catching
