It discerned the growing needs of the people, anticipated further developments, comprehended the boundless possibilities of our great republic, and with a high resolve, an honest conviction and a fearless leadership unfurled the banner of national progress in its broadest and most comprehensive sense.

The fortunes of war abound in surprises. Chance sometimes dictates the course of progress. Civilization must triumph in every land and under every sky. The spirit of expansion, the desire for enlarged national growth, the great boulevard of progress down all the higher blessings of civilization. But the opponents of so-called expansion say that we are departing from the position and tenets of our fathers. I answer, no. We are simply rising to the new conditions that surround us.
