

GALA DAY FOR BOHEMIANS

Many Thousands Join Together in Celebrating Opening of New Hall.

DEDICATION AN AUSPICIOUS OCCASION

Handsome New Edifice Thronged During Opening Exercises. Large Number of Bohemian Societies Participate in Parade.

Two thousand and more of the Bohemian residents of Omaha joined together in mirth, music and speechmaking Sunday afternoon in dedicating the magnificent new hall of the Tel Jed Sokol society, which is the strongest and largest of the Bohemian Turner clubs in the city. It was a gala occasion and one which marked an epoch in the history of one of the best, most public-spirited and progressive foreign elements in Omaha's citizenship.

The Tel Jed Sokol society, by whom the large, handsome hall on South Thirteenth street was built, was joined in celebration of the opening exercises by all the Bohemian organizations of the city. A large number of Omaha and a fitting beginning for the occasion was the magnificent parade, which formed at Metz hall, the former meeting place of the society, and marched south on Thirteenth street to the new hall.

The parade, headed by W. Buresh, grand marshal of the day, followed by carriages containing the guests of honor and the speakers of the day. Then came the following Bohemian societies: Tel Jed Sokol of South Omaha, Sokol Tys, Catholic Sokol, Rad Pasky No. 1, Z. C. B. No. 144 of Omaha, C. S. P. S. Columbus Woodmen of the World No. 69, Camp Lupa No. 183, Woodmen of the World, Bohemia Modern Woodmen, Comenius No. 76, Woodmen of the World; Jan Hus Lodge, Knights of Pythias; Prague No. 228, American Order of United Workmen of South Omaha; Bohemia Ancient Order of United Workmen, Catholic Workmen, St. Alois Catholic society and, bringing up the rear, the Tel Jed Sokol of Omaha.

Remarks by President Havlicka. In his opening remarks President Havlicka said: "On this, the occasion of the opening of our new hall, we have much for which to be thankful and little to regret. Three many years have elapsed since our society began the contemplation of that which has now been accomplished. Through these many years of uncertainty and doubt most of us have had abiding faith in the final consummation of that which we had under way. The purpose and aim of our society are to develop and strengthen the body and improve the mind. We advocate the fraternal relations of the brother and sister in order to bring this about we attempt to advance the social life of our members. We believe that the development of the body imparts new life and fire to the intellect, and thus exerts a power comprehended by but few.

Remarks by Mayor Moore. Mayor Moore, in his address, congratulated the Bohemians upon the successful crowning of their efforts to build a hall and said that the new building was a magnificent temple in which the members and their friends could meet and enjoy themselves in the manner for which Bohemians are noted. He indicated his pleasure that so many Bohemians had settled in America under the glorious flag which

NATURE SMILES ONCE MORE

Exposition Bathed in the Bright Sunshine of an August Day.

GOOD-SIZED CROWDS ARE IN ATTENDANCE

Drawn Thither by the Music and Other Attractions, an Unusually Large Number of Strangers Visit the Grounds.

MONDAY. 11 a. m.—Indian band at the Colonial building. 2:30 p. m.—Godfrey's British band at the Government building. 3:30 p. m.—Hunting races, Indian pony races and bucking bronchos at the Race Course (no extra charge). 7 p. m.—Godfrey's British band and Indian band at the Grand Plaza in a grand military musical spectacle entitled "San Juan of the Army Quadrilles," specially arranged for the Greater America Exposition by the exposition managers. The entire production will be presented toward the close of the evening concert on the Plaza and will be followed by the following: Godfrey's British band, Adelmans and his band, the Indian drum corps under J. O. Sloan, composed exclusively of veteran drum majors, four companies of American soldiers in full uniform, small arms, ammunition, cannon and flags.

The storm clouds that hung over this section of the country during Friday and Saturday broke Sunday morning and the sun shone as brightly as during a day in May. The change in the weather conditions brought joy to the hearts of the exposition managers, and it was with feelings of satisfaction that they watched the crowds pass through the gates from early morning until late at night. The attendance was the largest of any Sunday since the opening and what was more, there were many strangers. During the day a party of about thirty, from St. Joseph, some from Sioux City, and a small delegation from Lincoln. In addition to these there were many from along the line of the Union Pacific and some twenty-five from off the Missouri Pacific, parties who came from the vicinity of Lincoln.

In the evening the usual Omaha visitors turned out and swelled the attendance to such an extent that the gates showed nearly 7,000 on the grounds. The strangers, as a rule, expressed themselves as being favorably impressed with the exhibition. They were particularly so with the grounds and the illuminations. The Sunday features were well attended. The Indian parade around the Grand court in connection with the Indian band drew all the people to the bank of the river. The afternoon filled with building, while the concert in front of the Government building later in the day drew a good-sized crowd. The concert on the Plaza in the evening proved to be an attractive feature and a very successful one. It did not care for wandering along the midway.

The exposition people have closed the contract for another free feature which they hope will be a drawing card. It is an electric fountain that will be in operation Thursday night. The company that owns the plant comes from St. Joseph. The manager is here now and has ordered the outfit shipped. It will arrive tomorrow. It will run every evening for a period of thirty days. The fountain is a double electric fountain seen in Jackson Park at Chicago during the World's fair.

FILIPINOS ARE ON THE GROUND

Natives of the Island of Luzon Come to Exposition. A party of about twenty men, four women and two children, direct from the island of Luzon, arrived Sunday and took up their quarters in the Philippine village. None of these people speak English. The only word that they have been able to learn is "Hello." Like these people, a few days ago, these people are small, well built and active. Their complexion is about the color of the Japanese. Their hair is black and straight. Among the number is Benito Malli, who was a hostler for Colonel Stoenberg prior to his death, near Manila. This man is about 25 years of age and has been a soldier. He is pink-marked and slightly larger than his fellows. Nearly all the men in the village are farmers. They are most of an entire absence of waste land. The Platte, Republican, Elkhor, Loup and Niobrara are the principal interior rivers, all moving from west to east, or southeast. Each of these large streams has numerous tributaries and the banks are fertile. The soil is especially fertile, though hilly land is much preferred for general farming. A superior system of public schools and an inexhaustible state fund from which to maintain them; churches in every village and almost every valley; a fairly good government; the state, and a most invigorating and healthy climate, combine to make Nebraska desirable, in every sense of the term, for a residence. The wonderful fertility of its soil and its great depth assure the husbandman satisfactory returns for his labor for a long period. Being adapted to all cereals, orchard and vineyard crops, and producing luxuriant pasturage, Nebraska offers special inducements to agricultural settlers and stock growers. The railways afford quick and cheap transportation to excellent local and foreign markets. By the system of freight rates in force on the lines leading to and into Nebraska, the producer on the Nebraska plains is at no disadvantage with his eastern neighbor, so far as the shipping of his products is concerned. Grain brings as much in an interior city in Nebraska as it does in an interior city in Iowa. Besides this, a market is being created in the mining and stock-growing regions to the west.

NO FANS ARE NOW REQUIRED

People of Omaha Once More Enjoy Life After the Sweetering Torrid Weather. The gradual lowering of the temperature which began Thursday morning with the advent of rain, and has since continued, came like a blessing from above to the sweetering people of Omaha and vicinity. For a few days the torrid of the temperature was such as to send every one in search of a fan, and every electric old producer in the town was worked over time. But for the past three days fans have gone out of fashion and those people who have been in the habit of perspiring freely minus their coats and vests have once more donned their usual wearing apparel and are comfortable.

Yesterday was a day for comfort and the people of the city were out from early morning until late in the evening. They began by going to church in the morning and the sanctuaries, which have been well high de-populated for the last Sunday or two, were well filled with worshippers. In the afternoon street cars were crowded with people seeking the parks and suburbs and cars going to the exposition were crowded. Several excursions were also well patronized and the people acted in general like small boys who have just been released from the rigorous restraints of the school room. The temperature reached 93 at 5 p. m. Wednesday and after that there was a perceptible cooling, while on Thursday the highest point reached was 88 at 3 p. m. Friday the temperature registered at 84 and never got higher than 70 all day. Saturday the weather still remained cool, the highest temperature being at 3 p. m., when it reached 73. Sunday the range was from 67 at 5 a. m. to 78 at 4 p. m. and the clouds that obscured the sun nearly all day were conducive to comfort. From all indications the break in the little stretch of torrid weather we have been undergoing will be of some duration and the outlook for a few days of solid comfort is propitious.

ENTERTAINS THE SIOUX INDIANS

President Miller, Re-enters Some Early Days of His Life in Omaha. Yesterday morning a number of the Sioux Indians participated in the parade around the lagoon. After completing the circuit of the little sheet of water the Indians passed under the Administration arch, where they met President Miller, who was standing there, talking with a party of friends. The Indians stopped and introductions followed. After a handshake all round, President Miller recited some of his early experiences in Omaha. The address, which was directed particularly to Little Wound, who is the head chief of the tribe and, in fact, the head war chief of the Sioux nation. After some preliminary talk relative to the exposition President Miller informed the old chief that he had resided here nearly fifty years. He told the old warrior that as a young doctor he came west to carve his fortune and a name. When he reached Omaha it was a town of a few hundred inhabitants and that all around on the bluffs were the tepees of the Pawnee and the Sioux, who were members of two great and powerful nations. To the south were the Pawnees and to the north were the Sioux. The favorite camping place of the Sioux, the speaker said, was along the bluff just north of the exposition grounds. In those days the buffaloes were almost as numerous as the blades of grass upon the prairie. President Miller informed the old chief that his first patient was an Indian whose bones now repose in an unmarked grave not far from where Riverview park is now located. The march of civilization drove the Indians back, their lands were taken from them and today, he added, many of them are respected people of a race that is rapidly dying out. The old chief listened with great respect and interest. His words were interpreted for him by the Indians of the Nebraska plains. Referring to the taking of the land of his people, he expressed some bitterness and ventured a prediction that it was another case where might was right. In a humorous vein the old Indian said that when a young man President Miller's skill as a great medicine man was carried far and wide among the Indians of the Nebraska plains. Referring to the first patient that the doctor secured after coming to Omaha, the chief merely remarked: "I guess the medicine was too strong for an Indian." This caused a study to pass over the face of the old Indian, who nodded an approval of the opinion expressed by his leader. After another handshake the Indians gathered their blankets around them and stalked off to their quarters, conversing among themselves relative to the pleasant trip they had taken.

ADVANTAGE TO THE STATE

Historical Publication Designed to Disseminate Information Concerning Nebraska. A most comprehensive and detailed description of our state, delineating its agricultural, stockraising and mineral resources and teeming with reports and statistics relative to points of interest, has just been published in book form by the Union Pacific railway. Credit for the compilation of this important information is due the passenger department of the Union Pacific, and books of a like nature, descriptive of Kansas and Colorado, have been published. The preface gives a general outline of the book as follows: "Within the boundaries of Nebraska are vast areas of the most fertile and productive soil on the continent. It is nearly all arable, and every acre is valuable either for agriculture or stock raising. There is an entire absence of waste land. The Platte, Republican, Elkhor, Loup and Niobrara are the principal interior rivers, all moving from west to east, or southeast. Each of these large streams has numerous tributaries and the banks are fertile. The soil is especially fertile, though hilly land is much preferred for general farming. CONCRETE LAYING

At 6:30 o'clock next Sunday the cornerstone of the new Episcopal church at the corner of Twenty-fourth and J streets will be laid. Rev. Canon Whitmarsh, formerly rector of St. Martin's church, will be in charge of the ceremony, while the sermon will be delivered by Rev. W. Everett Johnson of the Church of the Redeemer of New York City. Rev. Johnson is a brother of the present rector of St. Martin's church. The foundations of the building are about completed and it is expected that after the laying of the cornerstone the structure will be pushed to completion.

LIVE STOCK RECEIPTS

During the month of July 29,839 head of cattle, 198,114 head of hogs and 28,741 head of sheep were slaughtered at the packing houses here. The receipts at the yards were in excess of the figures given, but the shipment of the country make the difference between the actual receipts and the number of killed. It is expected that shipments of cattle from the range country will commence about the middle of this month. There has been a decrease in the marketing of hogs during the last week, but prices still hold at about the same figures as the week before.

TO OPERATE ON OLANHAN

It is the intention of physicians to operate on Ed Callahan at the South Omaha hospital today. The artery in the neck, which was severed by a bullet in 1897, is to be united and thus it is to be drained from the wound in the right breast. In case the patient rallies from the operation it is thought that he will recover. Callahan has stated positively that Shanahan shot him and in case he dies the statement will be used by the county officials.

GROWTH OF NEBRASKA

The relationship of the Union Pacific railroad to the growth of Nebraska is given in the following table: "The important part played by the Union Pacific in the development of the state of Nebraska cannot be estimated by any array of figures. The construction of the road, its rise and triumph, are a part of the history of the state, and the difference of the prosperity of the road also witnesses the growth and increasing wealth of this grand young commonwealth. Since that memorable day in July, 1866, when the first rail was laid, the Union Pacific has been a strong friend and helper to the state. Today the Nebraska division of the road covers 973 miles of track—that is, the main line and branches. Vast regions of fertile country have thus been opened up to settlement. The population of Nebraska in 1866 was 4,494; in 1869, 28,841; in 1870, 122,993; in 1875, 257,280; in 1880, 452,402; in 1885, 746,645; and in 1890 the United States census gave 1,056,793. The crop yield of 1898 was of enormous magnitude: Corn, 180,611,544 bushels; wheat, 31,981,200; oats, 54,411,900; rye, 6,215,000. Since the first settlement in 1824, there have been planted with forest trees in Nebraska 248,000 acres, or over 600,000 trees, all of which are in a prosperous condition. The assessed value of the state is over $200,000,000; there are 120,000 farms under cultivation, and 100,000 owners; and there are 600,000 acres of improved land in Nebraska. The begin-

THROWN FROM A MOTOR CAR

Alex Gopp Sustains Two Bad Cuts by Coming in Contact with the Pavement. Alex Gopp, who resides at Twenty-sixth and Harney streets, was thrown from a moving motor car at Twenty-fourth and Farnam streets Sunday night about 10 o'clock and sustained a severe cut over his left eye and one in his lower lip and his left hand was badly bruised. He was stunned by the fall and was removed to a drug store nearby where restoratives were applied. Later he was taken to the Methodist hospital, where the wounds were dressed. Mr. Gopp is employed by Thomas Kilpatrick. He said he was getting ready to leave the car at Twenty-sixth street, and in some manner lost his balance and fell from the car while it was in motion. He was unable to state clearly just how it happened and the accident happened so swiftly that no one seemed to understand just how it occurred.
