Then I branched out a little and told her if she was rich or had rank and breeding she might get him as a purchas able commodity, for humankind has never quite ascended to a point beyond that, bu that his love would not go with his person and his legal binding. That goes where i the object of their love, trusting to some more unsatisfactory way out of a difficult could not be chosen, as thousands of unmen and women in love were reasoning beings, I said, life, at least married life, would be a far different existence, but since they are not, nothing can be done to ameliorate their condition except to let them choose their own way, marry as suits their infatuation, and let the end come as ft may. brought in by county treasurers from the short grass country to pay taxes. When a county treasurer would saunter into the capitol with a $10,000 bill carelessly sticking out of his vest pocket it was in the true Kansas spirit, and when he threw it on a counter to pay for a eigar the clerk would say: "I haven't the change, but I'll just run out and get it," which he did not do. These bills were issued under an act of July 12, 1882, and bear date September 1, 1882. They are numbered A 3380 and A 7674 respectively and bear the likeness of Andrew Jackson.

They have been in the state treasury several years and are considerably worn owing to the fact that they have been handled considerably by the free citizens of Kaneas, who drop in occasionally to finger their big money.

Kansas also owns three $5,000 bills which are of the same act as the $10,000 bills and bear the picture of ex-President Madison. They also are much worn from handling and will soon have to be returned to the United States treasury and new ones substituted.
