 Forty-fifth Annual Convention of International Typographical Union in Session at Detroit.
 DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 14.—Of 400 persons present today when the forty-fifth annual convention of the International Typographical union opened 168 were delegates and 132 ex-delegates.
 President Donnelly's report announced that the international union is in the most prosperous condition since 1882. The report declared that too frequent use of the strike has lessened its effectiveness. Biennial instead of annual conventions were recommended hereafter.
 The committee on shorter work-day reported that the membership of Typographical unions last November was 27,435.
 Of these 24,967 members were in the enjoyment of the nine-hour day.
Four Lives Crushed Out.
 CANASTOTA, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Three men named Answorth and a boy named Hall were struck by the westbound express and instantly killed here tonight. They were crossing the Central tracks when the fast mail, No. 11, running at a high rate, struck them, throwing them into the air and crushing them to death.

the telegram were given, one official and one semi-official.
 M. Demange said that in communicating the official text November 2 Sandherr employed the official character.
 Counsel next asked General Mercier why the explanations of the secret dossier were not included in the dossier relating to the revision.
 The general replied that he considered these explanations were given for his personal use and that was why he destroyed the document.
 The witness repudiated the suggestion.
 Dreyfus, at this point, rose from his seat and asked leave to explain in regard to the assertion that he had traced on a card the itinerary of a certain journey of the general to Metz, Nancy and journey, he asserted, were purely fictitious.
No Promises to Dreyfus.
 M. Casimir-Perier then said he desired to reiterate that he had never promised anything to Dreyfus, adding that it was with M. Waldeck-Rousseau alone that he had spoken in regard to the condemned man. Therefore, M. Casimir-Perier reiterated his protest at the letters of Dreyfus referring to negotiations.
 This caused M. Demange to explain how Dreyfus came to say that Casimir-Perier had promised him a public trial.
 After M. Demange had asked M. Waldeck-Rousseau to intervene with M. Casimir-Perier (then president of France) to obtain publicity, M. Waldeck-Rousseau reported that the president appeared favorable to the suggestion, and counsel therefore thought he might secure the release of Dreyfus. M. Demange added that it must be remembered Dreyfus wrote the letter four years after the occurrence and his recollections of the facts naturally lacked precision. M. Demange expressed regret that he was unable to produce the original of the letter, but apologized to M. Casimir-Perier, who thanked counsel for his expression of regret and explanation.
General Billot on the Stand.
 General Billot, former minister of war, was the next witness. He was in uniform, sat with crossed legs and gave his evidence in a conversational manner. He said he would first treat of the day tomorrow. Like everybody else, he added, he had some knowledge of the Dreyfus affair before taking the war portfolio. While feeling deeply on the subject, he remained aloof from the matter until he returned to cabinet. In a somewhat despondent mood, he said, the witness continued, M. Scheurer-Kestner (a former vice president of the senate) asked him whether he ought not to investigate the Dreyfus affair. M. Scheurer-Kestner, the general pointed out, had made similar suggestions to M. Dreyfus, and he had the same reply from both, that neither of them were very conversant with the affair.
 General Billot dwelt at length upon the action taken by M. Scheurer-Kestner, to whom he recommended prudence. M. Scheurer-Kestner, however, insisted that General Billot sign his conviction of the innocence of Dreyfus, but the general found the evidence insufficient and asked him to investigate the matter further.
 The general then dwelt with the role of Colonel Plehva, whom, he said, he holds in the highest esteem.
 "He is intelligent," said General Billot, "and gave me valuable information about the organization of a neighboring army and its artillery. This information showed me that the army remained exceptional in its artillery, which was the greatest in our artillery, and that great inferior, General Mercier."
 After this General Billot referred to Colonel Plehva's proposition to entrap Dreyfus. He suggested that General Billot should advise the president to "never allow a secret without authorization."
Commends Colonel Plehva.
 General Billot next referred to the eminent services Colonel Plehva rendered to the army, leading to his being entrusted with a confidential mission to the east, and after that, to his being entrusted with a mission against the allegation that he had desired to send Colonel Plehva to a place from which he would never return. He explained his devotion to the country and army and his anxiety respecting the country of the nation. He then stated that he had not taken any measures, like resignation and going to distant points, whence it was possible to return with a superior rank, and where heroism certainly wiped out everything except treason (Senators).
 After justifying his course toward Colonel Plehva, General Billot explained what he had done in connection with Esterhazy. He then renewed his protests against the attack the defenders of Dreyfus made upon him during the trial of M. Zola and said that he had expressed a regret that while in power he was obliged to devote most of his time to the Dreyfus affair, which time, he added, ought to have been given to the guardianship of the national defense.
 VIENNA, Aug. 14.—August Hoelzig, a government railroad official, has been arrested for stealing the emergency mobilization plans, which he delivered to a man named G. Zinowiew, who is said to have communicated them to agents of France and Russia.

DISPUTE IN COURT-MARTIAL
 Ex-President Casimir-Perier Contradicts the Late War Minister.
RENAULT MAKES NO CONFESSION TO HIM
 Captain Came to Receive Reprimand for Talking Too Much—No Danger of War with Germany at That Time.
 RENNES, Aug. 14.—The shooting of M. Labori, leader of the court-martial of Alfred Dreyfus, robbed the morning session of the court-martial of its paramount interest. The intended murderer, apparently, chose today for the attempt because it was anticipated that M. Labori would crush General Mercier, the former minister of war with his cross-questioning.
 The news of the shooting of M. Labori caused an immense sensation in the court room, where the usual audience had assembled awaiting the entrance of the judges. M. Labori's absence had just been announced when suddenly M. Jaunay, syndic of the judiciary press, rushed into the room and shouted:
 "M. Labori has been shot."
 All present gave a gasp of horror and surprise and every man jumped to his feet and a volley of questions was hurled at M. Jaunay's head, who, crying "That is all I know," rushed out of court again, followed by a number of his hearers. Those who remained excitedly discussed the crime and vigorously denounced the assassin.
 Colonel Jouast, president of the court, when the news reached him, suspended the sitting of the court-martial until 7:15 a. m. It appears that M. Labori himself broke the news to the court and informed M. Jaunay of the crime, having pushed from her husband's side to the court crying "for doctor and shouting that her husband had been shot."
 M. Demange, when court assembled at 7:20 a. m., announced that, though his colleague would not be so serious as at first appeared, it would be impossible for the latter to participate in the proceedings.
Mercier Discredits Esterhazy.
 General Mercier was recalled and in reply to the president of the court he reiterated his belief that Major Count Esterhazy, in spite of the latter's own declaration, was not the author of the bordereau, which, the witness asserted, was written on tracing papers and was found in an embassy.
 The president asked M. Casimir-Perier to explain the circumstances of the confession Dreyfus is alleged to have made to Captain Lebrun Renault.
 M. Casimir-Perier persisted in his statement of Saturday that he had never received any confidences of this character from Captain Lebrun Renault. He added that M. Dupuy, the then premier, was present when Captain Lebrun Renault called at the Elysee palace.
 "Moreover," said M. Casimir-Perier, "here is a letter from M. Dupuy, which I ask may be read."
 The letter asserted that Captain Lebrun Renault, when questioned by M. Dupuy, had replied that General Mercier had sent him to the president to receive a dressing down for his indiscreet disclosures to the Pigeon.
 General Mercier here interposed, saying: "I am somewhat surprised to see in your regard to the confessions to the president of General Gouze, who will testify thereto. It was then that I ordered him to go to the president of the republic."
 Regarding General Mercier's declarations on Saturday last, the witness stated M. Casimir-Perier said:
Perier Contradicts Renault
 General Mercier had no right when he intervened in a diplomatic conversation. I would have prevented such interference. It was I alone who conferred with the minister following the official description: "Twenty-five to 30 years; flat peaked head; dressed like a workman in a blue blouse. A force of gendarmes, headed by M. Hennion, sub-chief of the secret police, is scouring the country in search of M. Labori's assassin and a company of infantry has been dispatched to surround and search the wood wherein the man is supposed to be hiding."
 An incredible side of the outrage is the fact, it is asserted, that several passers-by saw M. Labori shot and passed on indifferently, neither offering to help the victim nor joining in the pursuit of the assassin.
 Still more incredible is the fact that an individual who went to the side of M. Labori as he lay wounded on the ground, is said to have searched the pockets of the heavy flow of blood from the wound, and to have identified his identity and stolen their contents.
Assailant Fled at Once.
 The assailant fled after the shooting, holding his revolver in his hand, with his finger on the trigger and threatened several men who showed a disposition to block his way.
 The correspondent of the Associated Press at 10:45 o'clock this morning saw one of the doctors at M. Labori's house, which was guarded by four gendarmes. The doctor said that M. Labori was bearing the agony he was suffering with marvelous fortitude, and added:
 "He has been put to bed and is being watched by his wife. He has spoken, but not of himself; always about the trial. We have strong hopes that he will pull through and have sent an optimistic telegram to his family. It will be forty-eight hours, however, before we can speak with certainty of his condition. We have to thank the military surgeon for almost the first attention given to the sufferer. He came on bearing the news without hesitation. But a deplorable length of time elapsed before the ambulance arrived. M. Labori lay on the ground half an hour with the sky menacing a storm, which came within a few minutes after he reached home."
 At 2 o'clock this afternoon M. Labori was suffering great agony and the doctors, who had left the house, were hurriedly summoned to attend the patient. Colonel Jouast, after the close of the session of the court-martial, was allowed to see M. Labori. He expressed deepest regret at the occurrence.
 General Mercier followed, but the doctors declared that M. Labori could not bear such an interview in his present state and General Mercier was obliged to go away without seeing the wounded man.
 Mme. Labori is bearing up wonderfully and is doing all she can to cheer her husband.
 It appears that M. Labori received only yesterday two letters threatening that he would be shot, but he treated them as he had treated others of a similar nature which he has received frequently for months past, with contempt.
 The outrage is the sole topic of conversation in Rennes and abhorrence of the deed is expressed by friends and foes of the wounded man alike. The local papers are issuing frequent editions containing the latest details in regard to the affair.
Military Control the Subject.
 PARIS, Aug. 14.—At today's session of the Anglo-Venezuelan Boundary Arbitration commission Prof. John R. Beley, in continuing his presentation of the Venezuelan case, discussed the question of military control and jurisdiction, neither of which prior to 1850, he said, had extended west of the Essequibo river.
Falls Five Hundred Feet.
 BERNE, Aug. 14.—Hamilton Smith, an English lad 16 years of age, while descending the Oesens mountain, fell 500 feet down a precipice recently and was killed. Accompanied by two companions he had climbed the mountain without a guide from Chaurion.

threw up his arms and cried "Ho la la" (which is a common French exclamation) and fell flat upon his face. I and one or two others who saw the deed ran up, but the murderers had vanished down the lane. Help was immediately sent for and the gendarmes arrived and soon arrested Mme. Labori.
 "M. Labori on falling retained presence of mind enough to arrange his dark morocco wallet, in which he carried his papers, under his head for a pillow, until his wife arrived, when he half raised himself and dropped his head in her lap."
Escape of Murderers.
 A number of laborers who were unloading a cargo of stones beside the river heard the shouts of "Murder," "Stop him," raised by the pursuers and one of them placed himself in the way of the murderer, who, covering him with a revolver, shouted:
 "Let me pass. I have shot Dreyfus."
 The man was so taken aback that he drew aside and allowed the assassin to proceed.
 The murderer ran across the fields until he reached the railroad. He crossed the embankment and followed the track until he arrived at the level crossing. A train was just arriving at full speed and the murderer dashed across the line in front of the train and toward the woods in the direction of the village of Chantepele, where he was lost to view.
 Colonel Piquart and his brother-in-law, M. Gast, who accompanied M. Labori on his way to the Lycee, pursued the murderer for some distance, but as they were both heavy men they were unable to continue the pursuit and so returned to the side of the wounded man, leaving the chase of the murderer to a number of laborers and peasants, who declare they heard the murderer say when crossing the marshy field before he reached the railroad: "If I can't get away I will go for them."
 Mme. Labori, wife of the wounded laborer, was promptly notified of the crime and rushed to her husband's side. She found him with his head on the sidewalk and his body in the roadway. She threw herself by his side and took his head in her lap and fanned him with a colored paper fan, which she had evidently snatched up as she left the house.
 M. Labori was perfectly still. Not a groan came from his lips as he had rested in the lap of his wife, who, by the way, is an American. As she fanned him with her right hand she caressed him with her left, gazing lovingly on his upturned face. He tried to smile back at the tears which glistened in his wife's eyes, and she, manifesting her feelings heroically, did everything possible to surround and comfort the victim.
 It is reported that the famous lawyer said, as he lay wounded on the ground: "I may die from this, but Dreyfus is saved."
Bulletin of Physicians.
 8:30 a. m.—The following bulletin has been issued:
 Maitre Labori was shot from behind, the ball penetrating the posterior region of the thorax, on the right side, at the height of the fifth or sixth dorsal vertebrae. The heavy flow of blood from the wound, the exploration of the depth of the wound. The undersigned doctors hope the ball is buried in the muscles enveloping the vertebrae column. They must, however, maintain the full reserve respecting the integrity of the lung and spinal cord.
 The bulletin is signed by four doctors, Renaud, Reichel, Brisson and Vidal, and is timed at 8:20 o'clock this morning.
 Further details regarding the shooting of M. Labori show that the sky was overcast when M. Labori left his house, accompanied by Colonel Piquart and the latter's brother-in-law, M. Gast.
 M. Labori was laughing and chatting with his companions when he was shot. The party was passing the Quai Richmond and was about to cross the Chateaubriand bridge, when a man, hidden behind a wooden fence at a corner of the quai stepped out and fired at M. Labori.
 The wounded man fell to the ground. He tried to rise and put his hand to the wound in his back and brought the hand back covered with blood. As he lay there, with his clothes covered with the dust in which he had fallen, he said in a faint voice:
 "I beg you to give me my stick and my

Good Food Will Alone Cure Many DISEASES. Use GRAPE-NUTS QUICKLY RENOVATES THE ENTIRE BODY.

Improper food is responsible for many ailments of humanity.
 When one finds a sickness impending it is safer to make a radical change in the food than to go to self drugging.
 Your physician would tell you that is true.
 There are times when one needs the advice and care of a physician, but for slight disorders the surest and safest way is to change the food completely.
 Try, for example, for ten days the following breakfast: A little fruit, (little if any sugar), a dish of Grape-Nuts, (a famous breakfast food), and cream, a cup of Postum Cereal Food (Coffee and nothing more. Our word for it, you will feel a distinct gain in health and strength much as if the whole body had been washed clean and put in first-class order. It is certainly worth a trial if active good health is worth anything.
