SOON BECAME PESTS.

Tame Animals that Quickly Degen-erate Into Wild Beasts.

The notion that ordinary domestic animals, such as horses, cats, dogs, etc., may multiply so numerously as to become serious pests-Pacific Coast and all western points ... b 4:25 pm a 6:30 am Lincoln, Beatrice and Stromsburg Express . b 4:25 pm b 1:20 pm Fremont, Columbus, Norfolk, Grand Island and North Platte ... a 4:25 pm b 4:35 pm Columbus Local ... b 7:30 pm b 8:30 pm North Platte Local ... a 1:20 pm South Omaha Local Pass Leaves 6:30 and Agriculture.

It appears that in some of the western sta es wild horses have become a positive nuisance, and in 1897 Nevada passed a law permitting them to be shot. Recent reports from Washington likewise are to the effect that "cayuses" in that region are considered of so it the value that they are killed and used as balt for p Isoning wolves and coyotes. In this connection it is worth mentioning that in some portions of Australia wild horses have multiplied to such an extent as to consume the grass needed for sheep and other animals and hunters have been employed to shoot them. Where cats have run wild on isolated islands their work can be more accurately appreciated. For example, on Sable Island, off the coast of Nova Scotla, they were introduced about 1800 and rapidly exterminated the rabbits, which had been in possession for at least half a century. In one of the harbors of Kerguelen land, a barren and desclate bit of antarctic terra firma to the southeast of the Cape of Good Hope, cars, escaped from ships, have made themselves at home on a little island known as Cat Island, which has been long used for a wintering place for sealers. Here they live in holes in the ground, preying upon sea birds and their young, and are said to have developed such extraordinary ferocity that it is almost impossible to tame them even when captured young. Pigs have run wild in some of the southern states on certain islands, where, as on the Galapages, they were originally intro-duced to furnish food for crews of vessels in need of fresh meat. They were imported into New Zealand by Captain Cook about 1770 and, soon becoming wild, increased to a remarkable degree. A century later wild ..a 6:50 am a 9:35 pm pigs were so abundant in the flax thickets of the province of Taranaki, on the North Island, that a hunter could shoot fifty in a single day. In one case 25,000 wild pigs are said to have been killed there by three hunters in less than two years. Sheep and goats when numerous are liable to cause widespread injury, particularly in ferested regions. An instructive example of the damage done by goats is afforded by St. Helena, which is a mountainous island scarcely fifty square miles in extent, its highest summits reaching an elevation of 2,700 feet. At the time of its discovery, about the beginning of the sixteenth century, it is said to have been covered by dense forest; today it is described as a

After the closing of the supprementary trans-Atlantic mails named above, additional supplementary malls are opened on the plers of the American, English, French and German steamers, and remain open until within ten minutes of tine hour of sailing steamers. miles of rabbit-proof fences have been built and hundreds of schemes for destroying the animals have been suggested, but nothing

Hard Has the been suggested, but nothing has yet been found that will effectually exterminate the pest.

Natural enemies, such as cats and other carnivorous animals, have been introduced and in certain parts of New Zealand at least have become almost as much of a pest as the rabbits they were intended to kill. In 1887 no less than 19,182,539 rabbits were destroyed in New South Wales alone, but despite the efforts of the government and private land owners the rabbits seem to be still increasing.

Sable island, off the coast of Nova Scotia, has suffered from several plagues of rais, and it is said that the first superintendent of the fight station and his men were at one time threatened with starvation owing to the inroads made on their stores by rats. The common brown rat, otherwise known as the wharf rat or Norway rat, is of Asiatic origin and until 200 years ago was un-known in Europe or America. In the autumn of 1727 large numbers of this species entered Europe by swimming across the Volga, and, gaining a foothold in the province of Astrakhan, in eastern Russia, spread westward over central Europe. Five years later they reached England by vessels from western India. They arrived on the eastern shores of the United States about 1775, and by 1855 were abundant at several points on the Pacific coast. The black rat was the common house rat of Europe in the middle ages and was introduced into the new world about 1544, or more than 200 years earlier than the brown rat. In Porto Rico and some other islands the black rat has taken to living in the crowns of coconnut trees, to which latter it does great damage by biting off the unripe nuts, upon which it feeds. Similarly, the rats in Jamaica are said to have been driven to the trees by the mongoose, which was introduced in 1872 for the purpose of destroying these peats of the sugar-cane. Nine were imported, four male and five female, and they increased with such rapidity that soon they had spread to all parts of the island, even to the the highest mountains. As rat killers they surpassed expectations, but, as the rodents diminished, they took to attacking other animals, including young pigs, kids, lambs, kittens, pupples, poultry, ground-nesting game birds, lizards, snakes, frogs and land crabs. Also they ate bananas, pineapples, young corn, sweet potatoes and cocoanuts.
