Subject is Quite Fully Discussed by Rev. W. S. Barnes.

"The Ministry of Sorrow" was the subject taken by Rev. W. S. Barnes, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, for his sermon yesterday morning, the theme being suggested by the many deaths that have occurred in the congregation this summer. His text was taken from Job xxiii, 10; "When He hath tried me I shall come forth as gold." He said in part;

Or are these sorrows somehow to minister good to us, so that while we can not escape them nor mitigate their painfulness, yet we ourselves are not to he left by them just as they found us? Let us stop and think quietly today, in the stillness of God's house and under the inspiration of His presence. 'When He hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold.' We may acknowledge at once that God's hand is in it all. We are not the victims of blind fate. We live in a universe of intelligence, all of which is under the control and direction of one sovereign hand. We need to remind ourselves of this when the shadows have settled about us and the sharpness of our own suffering has made us forget the larger world and the Pass the impoverished metal through the fire and you reduce the hardness by removing the dross. Sorrow seems to serve as is good to weep. It makes us childlike. It has not become callous to pain. And we adults are reduced to the tenderness of childhood when something has brought us to the point of feeling at which we ween. The human heart is always tender under a real sorrow. Our hard feelings are overcome. Our little animosities, our petty jealousies and hostilities all fade away. They are drowned out by the flood of present sorrow. Then we can forgive, we can love, we can pity as we did not do before. The depths of the soul are broken up by the
