WASHINGTON, Aug. 20 .- Secretary Root here made public a plan for systematically the bad element of the Cuban army to bantaking care of the supplies contributed for the relief of the destitute Porto Ricans. It provides for a central committee of representative citizens of the country to which all local committees are to report. This committee is to have charge of distributing the supplies, which is to be done in a manner to secure the best possible results.

The following was sent by Secretary Root to each of the gentlemen named in the com-

War Department, Washington, D. C., Aug. 19, 1899.—My Dear Sir: The generous response of the American people to the call for relief for the people of Porto Rico, involving the collection of food and supplies offered of different kinds from different committees in different parts of the country, makes it necessary to somewhat systematize the work of relief. With this in view I have determined to request the fol-lowing gentlemen to act as a "central lorto Rican relief committee," to which I shall which may perform the very necessary duty minister the business affairs of the island of co-ordinating the procurement and fur-nishing of supplies, concentrating the money advance the commercial interests. furnished in one fund and regulating its "The population of the island is one-tenth expenditure so that the supplies furnished may conform to the requirements in character and quantity and confusion and waste of effort be avoided, viz.: Hon. CUBA'S PRESENT CONDITION Affairs All Over the Island Are Very Unsatisfactory-Farmers Are Doing Nothing.

A letter from W. B. Grafton of Kansas City, Kan., enlisted in the army in Cuba, to his mother, who is now visiting with the family of John A. Doe of Omaha gives some interesting points about conditions there from which the following is taken:

"The farmers are practically doing nothing toward putting the country on a produsing basis again. Some of the Cuban generals who were not given good positions under the military government are inciting ditisms. There are bandits all over island. They rob the farmers and often attack and loot the smaller towns. For produce anything. Few reports of these occurrences reach the American public. When these bandits are caught and brought to trial before the native judges, who were appointed by the military governors from among the best element of the revolutionary party, they are set free in the most barefaced manner. In this district people got tired of that and have been lynching them. Twenty-five were hung in the past month in this district of about 15,000 inhabitants, with which are associated countless preciou being followed by the administration. Large Crowd Enjoys Summer Day at the Exposition.

SACRED CONCERT A PRONOUNCED SUCCESS

Ideal Weather Brings Out City People and an Excursion Swells the Attendance-Music and Illuminations Make Up the Program.

MONDAY. 2:30 p. m.—Bellstedt's Concert band, Audiorium,
4 p. m.—Indian band, International hall.
7 p. m.—Bellstedt's Concert band, Plaza,
8:45 p. m.—New Electrical Fountain with Serpentine Dance and Indian band on the Lagoon.

Sunday was an ideal day at the exposition The blue sky with scarcely a cloud, save a fleecy one now and then, the cool breeze blowing across the Lagoon and above all, the flowers and foliage in the full blush of summer, making patches of brilliant color midst the white and shining buildings was a picture long to remain in memory; and there was good music to add yet more to the pleasure. The crowd was a large one It was such a crowd as walked leisurely about the grounds and then settled down at the concerts for hours of enjoyment, not a hurrying, pushing and rushing mass of people, but a sauntering, willing-to-be-

Besides the very liberal patronage of Omaha people, the attendance was augmented by a large excursion of people from Five coachloads came in at 11:30 in the morning, comprising the ex-cursion of the Order of Railway Engineers. This delegation was headed by the wellknown Fairbury band, which gave some stirring selections during the day. The members of the excursion remained over until evening in order to witness the illumination and the serpentine dance on the Lagoon, one and all seemingly well pleased with the day spent in the glowing white

In the afternoon at 3:30 Bellstedt's band gave a grand sacred concert in the auditorium, and that structure was filled with an intensely interested and enthusiastic audience. In calling the concert grand, no intention is meant of using the word in a showman sort of a way, for the concert was one to move the listeners in no ordinary manner. At each hearing the band seems to grow in favor with the people and each program shows some new excellences of the organization, and new powers of the leader are demonstrated.

The opening number was Verdi's "Aroldo," and it gave entire satisfaction; although it was not as popular as some of the other numbers. In the "Largo" Handel, the steady organ-like power of the band was felt. The selection is one which allows of the display of the sustaining quality of the band and is of a dignified and wholesome nature. Number 3 was a fantaisie arranged on some of the best known songs of Stephen Foster, one of America's most famous song writers. When it is statthis reason the farmers are not trying to ed that "Old entucky Home," "Suwanee River" and others of that sort were introduced in the medley, it will readily be seen that this selection met with favor. As an encore the dainty "Hearts and Flowers," by Tobani, was given. Mr. Bellstedt's popularity as a soloist was again attested to in no unmistakable manner and when he stepped torward to give his number he was greeted with liberal applause. He had selected an old hymn, one memories in the minds of the people, and that alone pleased the listeners. The old hymn "Nearer My God to Thee" with variations, or rather a fantaisle on that air, was the piece. On the broad background of the band the thin cry of the cornet stood out like a scarlet thread in black silk. The selection began with the minor and the shrill and sharp sounds were gradually modulated into the softest tones, as the player came to the theme proper, and then of what it could sustain without crowding. the brass instrument seemed to speak the words of the song in a voice of velvet. The which must be coaxed to give one crop a display of technical power later on where the variations are intricate gave another evidence of Mr. Bellstedt's mastery over the

When the last echo of the piece had dled away there was a tremendous applause and the audience insisted that a bow was not what was wanted. Mr. Bellstedt very accommodatingly responded by giving an old Welsh melody entitled "All Through the Night." The selection is one of great simplicity and beauty and promises to be a favorite.

One of the daintiest and most beautifu parts of the program was the ever welcome "Traumerel" by Schuman. The orchestration by Theodore Thomas was used, and under the skillful baton of Mr. Bellstedt all the seductive beauties of the peace were silver dollar is worth 60 cents today and brought out. When it is said that the band gave the piece with nearly as much softness and smoothness as a string orchestra some idea of how well it was played may he had. The imitation of the 'cello, the sombre sound of the oboes and the prominence of the flutes at times made the number of more than usual pleasure.

> One of the big numbers, and one that was handled in a masterful style was the "Second Hungarian Rhapsodie" by Lizst. is a tremendous piece, and it gave the bandmaster an opportunity to allow the full power of his band an outlet. The strange, wild music is remarkably well adapted for band rendition

A novelty, and one that attracted a great deal of attention, was the solo for drums given by Mr. Max Nickell. He placed four drums on as many chairs and with the band as accompanist bombarded the ears of the audience with a rapidity almost so swift as to make one continual roar, and the next instant would diminish the sound until it was hardly discernable and sounded like the patter of pins. Mr. Nickell was forced to respond to an insistent encore.

The crowning glory of the concert, as it is to any sacred concert, was the Hallelujah chorus from the "Messiah." This is probably the grandest music ever written, and the wonderful power in it seems never to tire a person, no matter how many times it is heard. With the mighty sustained sound of Bellstedt's band pouring forth the great music it would not be hard to imagine that the hosts of heaven itself were singing the anthem. The only thing to mar the number was the fact that the audience remained seated during its rendition, something that is never dene in Europe, where at the opening strains every person in the vast audiences arise and stand until the last note

At 5 o'clock the Indian band gave a concert at the Government building, which was listened to by a large crowd. At 7 o'clock Belistedt's band gave another concert which drew out many people.

The day's program came to a close with the illumination and the beautiful effects of the electric fountain on the Lagoon.

GOOD PICTURES ON EXHIBITION. Gallery No. 1 in Fine Arts Building Has Some Fine Canvases.

The attendance at the art exhibit Sunday was out of the ordinary, the people seeming to have more time to study the pic tures, and since the catalogues have been issued there is more pleasure in looking at them. Gallery No. 1, in the east wing, has over one hundred pictures on its walls, some of them of more than common merit. Upon entering, the first picture that strikes the eye, almost brutally with its bold coloring, is Robert Reid's "Hospitality." The picture grows upon one however, and later the crude coloring seems to soften. The figures in the picture are somewhat conventional and follow after the style of the mag- regiment during the Spanish war.

A woman in thin white drapery standing in a garden filled with last full week's engagement they are to play sunlight is the subject. It is not altogether in Omaha this season at Boyd's theater Sunpleasing, but will bear study. A quaint old cottage peeps from in this city, although during the past year behind the trees, to add to the homely beauty of the scene.

C. Hassen is represented by two pictures, boh of the impressionist school. One of them is of two women at a summer hotel. They are sitting on a veranda and the summery effect obtained is fine. The other is a picture of an old stage coach going up a dusty road. It is wholly impressionistic and only at a distance can its beauties be seen at all. Two seascapes are hung side by side. One of them shows the sea in its blue aspect, the other when it is emerald in hue. Both pictures are well worth studying. A canvas by Remington will attract attention by reason of its story. It is tensely called "Missing." A group of Indians with a man in their midst around whose neck a noose is placed tells the story. Two dainty squares of painting are by Bruce Carne. They are pictures of apple trees in the full blush of blossom time, oue being a hillside orchard and the other a plowed field. "In the Month of May" is a canvas by Leonard Ochtman. It is a large one, and is full of the free, fresh air of spring. The apple trees are full of flowers. In the distance are trees in their spring tints and there is good atmosphere to the picture. There are many other good canvasees in the room that will bear study.

Since the arrival of Bellstedt's band with its large numbers, the "Olympia" has been simply a useless ugliness in the middle of the lagoon, as its small hulk will not nearly accommodate the members of the band Under the direction of Director Kelly, the boat will be remodeled and it will then be of some use. Mr. Kelly has decided to take down the turrets and masts and in their place build a regular quarter deck that will give more room on the boat. The band will then be placed on the Lagoon during the Venetian carnivals. It is the intention to complete the changes by Friday night of this week so that the coming carnival will be one of the best yet given.

...AMUSEMENTS...

The Woodward Stock company opened the a number of different versions of it have been presented throughout the east by different leading actors with great success, but none of them have been seen so far west as Omaha and naturally the appetite of the theater-going public here is well whetted for the play. The version used by the Woodward company is a combined one and includes the best parts of those used so successfully during the past season by E. H. Sothern, James K. O'Neill, Paul Gilmore and others. It tells the well known dashing old story that boys in France, England and America have read with delight for two generations in a short concise way and with all of the dramatic action possible. The play is a quasi-classic in France and it has been translated, adapted, mutilated and acted in nearly every country under the sun. Whatever the superficial modifications may be, its principal charm lies in an impetuous, illogical, romantic action, which has always remained essentially unaltered and unalterable

The Woodward company have had only a short time to rehearse and produce it, the decision to do so having only been made by Mr. Woodward within the last two weeks, and the performance given Sunday afternoon was under the circumstances a most credit able one. Of course, there were incongruities and many rough places, but under the capable stage direction of Mr. Enos, by the middle of the week the Woodward company will give as good a production of the piece as one would care to see. The costumes are beautiful and well in keeping with the era of the piece. Willis Granger, as D'Artagnan. gave an entertaining interpretation of that celebrated character of impetuosity and daring. He thoroughly looked the part of the Gascon swashbuckler and he acted intelfigently and with satisfactory effect. He seemed fully at his ease, his gestures were graceful and his duelling and quarreling episodes were carried with convincing fire and the love-making and lighter portions of his work were deftly handled.

Miss Kennark as Lady De Winter gave an especially strong and convincing interpretation of this rather thankless role. Her costumes are beautiful, being the most striking that she has worn during the Woodward company's engagement here. A captivating performance was the Constance of Miss Emma Dunn, whose scenes with D'Artagnan were among the prettiest bi's of ingenue work imaginable. Mr. Enos' interpretation of the Cardinal was a careful and conscientious one and thoroughly satisfactory. Wm. Riley Hatch, who has been loaned to Mr. Woodward by the Trocadero Opera company for the week, was a decidedly clever Athos and looked the part of one of the three swashbuckling musketeers to perfection. He has a splendid physique, handsome face and faultless enunciation. all of which make him particularly pleasing. Miss Berkeley made a regal and admirable dramatic queen, Mr. Beresford a very good king, while the balance of the roles were cast with care and consideration. Musketeers" runs the entire week and Friday of next week the Woodward company close their engagement here with a production of "Moths."

The Trocadero Opera company opened the third week Sunday night with a performance of Andrau's three-act comic opera, "The Mascotte." To have heard the audience hour." which filled every available seat in the every years, and yet retain its popularity as it new and up-to-date jokes and the substitution of some of the popular airs of the day for others of the original score, it is made as thoroughly as enjoyable. If not more so, than ever. The performance of it as given last evening by this new organization, which has already established itself as a prime favorite, was in every way adequate. The scenery was in keeping with the opera, while the costumes were quite gorgeous and beautiful. The chorus, which is one of the strongest for its size that has yet been seen in this city, made the ensemble work of the piece particularly pleasing and praiseworthy, which reflects much credit upon the capable musical direction of Mr. Zinn. Miss Mortimer sang the title role in he usual free and easy manner and her splendid soprano voice was heard to advantage, especially in the rendition of Arditi's famous song "The Daisie." The comedy portion of the play, which is, of course, the greater part of it, was capably handled by Maurice Hageman and William Hicks. Mr. Hageman as Lorenzo Prince of Pimbino had the best opportunity to display his talent as a comedian that has been given him so far during the company's engagement here overhear on the exposition grounds and and every advantage was taken of it. His elsewhere the universal verdict seems to rendition of "The Wise Men of All Ages" and the parody on "Zizzy Ze Zum Zum" each won for him several encores. Hicks was a clever foil for his comedy, and together they kept the audience in almost a continuous uproar during the entire time they were upon the stage. As Pippa the Shepard, Harry Davies, the leading tenor of the company, made a decided hit. His solo, "The Sweetest Story Ever Told," was beautifully rendered and received recognition at the hands of the audience by unstinted applause. The Gobble duet rendered by Mr. Davies and Miss Mortimer was very well done. Miss Alice James made a beau

Drex L. Shooman—

Shows and sells more men's $2.00 shoes than all the rest of Omaha combined-great loads of them are received every season-the $2.00 shoes we offer this year are the best that $2.00 can buy or even will buy-these are good, strong, wearing shoes-more suitable for the mechanic or other persons that are on their feet a large part of their timewe have nothing but recommendations to offer for them and our reputation stands back of every pair.
