

SIGNS OF A LIVELY SEASON

Absorbing Round of Dinners, Receptions and Balls Announces Itself.

PREPARATIONS FOR AK-SAR BEN BALL

Elaborate Costumes Already Being Planned—Group of Charming Hubs a Promised Addition to Society Circles This Winter.

In spite of the overwhelming defeat which Dame Society received at the hands of the soldiers last week, that very sprightly lady "bobbed up serenely" with the new week and set a pace that even the usually variety of heat and winds which usually usher in the first few days of September and huris a deadly blow at social doings could not stop the giddy whirl of receptions and marriages and luncheons through which this most exciting queen led her devotees. That the social ball will be kept on a lively roll for the next six months is unquestioned. Already preparations are being made to make the Ak-Sar-Ben court ball a surprise and brilliancy in precedence, though the names of the royal party and the extent of the festivities are a state secret at present. Nevertheless, the society girl is in a perpetual state of worry and her pretty brow in an unending state of anxiety as she endeavors to solve the momentous question of what she will wear, whether blue or pink is her peculiar color and whether Miss A. or Miss B. is the most fashionable modiste. Then come the numerous receptions and teas to introduce the fair young buds to the already reigning belles and beaux; and if more may be relied upon, a very charming bouquet of American Beauties will grace the social realm this year. But this is another state of uncertainty, for the fashionable world is most reticent in making known its plans before they are fully in working order.

The circus was the first of the series of entertainments on the social program. And the four hundred forgot their conservatism for the nonce and joined in the frolic and fun. A few even disdained the reserved seat section, but sat on the top board and swung their feet and ate peanuts and and glorious times were had by all there, too, and the fore-runners of the early fall hats, for the society girl never forgets the important part she plays in the panorama of life and her costumes add much to its success.

At 8 o'clock Wednesday evening Miss Frances Amy Barker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Barker, was united in marriage to Mr. Charles Wellington Martin. About 100 friends gathered at the home of the bride's parents to witness the ceremony, which was most impressively performed by Dean Fair of Trinity cathedral. As the Episcopal service was performed by a bank of palms and cut flowers, played the wedding march the bridal party entered the north parlor and took their places in the bay window under a huge ball of pink roses, with palms and ferns and curtains of smilax for a background. Miss Mary Barker, sister of the bride, and Mr. Frank Martin, brother of the groom, acted as bridesmaid and best man. The bride was simply attired in white silk muslin over white tulle, trimmed in ribbons and with a train. The bride veil was held to the hair by a nose bouquet of the same flowers. The bridesmaid was gowned in pink muslin over pink silk and carried pink roses. The same color was carried out in the profuse decorations of the dining room, where refreshments were served. The solemn, impressive ceremony was read by Rev. Dr. J. E. Reilly of St. Matthias' church. Promptly at 10 o'clock the organ pealed forth the wedding march and the bride entered the arch of her father, Mr. W. T. Buchanan. They were met at the altar by the groom and Dr. Reilly. There were no attendants. The church was tastefully decorated with flowers and ribbons and the bride wore the conventional bridal gown of white. MUSIC.

If the present scheme for a choral-orchestral organization goes through it is an assured fact that Omaha will be musically this season. Mr. George Holbrook, the former successful secretary of the Apollo club, and a student of twenty-five years, formulated a plan whereby a successful permanent organization can be put up. The membership will be limited to forty instrumentalists, professional and advanced amateurs (if arranged) and 100 vocalists, professional, semi-professional and advanced amateurs. The concerts will be given regularly and will be of various natures. The first concert will be taken up will be, in all probability, "St. John's Eve," a beautiful and somewhat difficult work by Frederic Cowen. An admission fee will be charged and will be redeemable in tickets, so that a member can either give away tickets to his friends or dispose of them on the market, thereby refunding to himself his cash subscription. Any one interested in this movement and anxious to be identified with it will help matters by coming on the market inside the next week to Hesper's music store, addressed Street Apollo Choral-Orchestral Society. Those who are interested in music, but who are not singers or players, will be received as honorary members and will be given the same privileges as those who are for the press committee, program and printing committee, seat sale committee and others to be formed. Now is the time to get one long, strong pull in the direction of good music. Who will be the first to cooperate in the work of trying to rise above the "Coke-walk-Blowing-up-of-the-Maine-Little White standard?" Of course, we must look for opposition from those who should be first to help. That is, from the professional money-grubbers, who are those who will stand aside and try to draw others aside. Some will try to prevent their pupils from joining a society for the promotion of the best in art. Well, there were some who did this when they were building the ark, but later they were very anxious to get in out of the wet. This movement is non-partisan absolutely. It must be so, for the reason that there has as yet been no committee appointed. It is intended for a big, broad, generous scheme, which will embrace Omaha, Council Bluffs, South Omaha, Papillion, and members from Chicago or San Francisco will not be excluded. There is no reason why professional musicians in Omaha, and some in Council Bluffs and South Omaha, should not be on some committee.

A letter was received from some ardent music lover last week and the music of the exposition which has been referred by the editor of The Bee to the musical critic. This letter is an appeal for good music at the exposition, but cannot be referred to in this column because the writer thereof allowed his personal prejudices to run away with his good taste. This column is not intended nor is any other, as a space for having diversified monologues on the various good and bad points of several prominent musicians from a personal standpoint and as some rather delicate comparisons are made with regard to Sousa, Innes, Bellested, Philney and the Marine band, in such a way as to indicate that the author of the "bordereau" knows nothing about bands or band affairs, it will be reproduced only in part. "My suggestion is this," says the writer, "when the three weeks are up for Bellested, if we cannot get a better one, urge the management to get a cheaper or poorer one. Several organizations are now being organized closing month of the show, none of which, so far as I can learn, are anywhere near the equal of Bellested, and one band manager is now securing names to a petition to be presented to the management asking that a contract be made with his band for the closing month. The band is fairly good, not a great deal better than some we have in Omaha. Mr. Editor, please use your great influence in urging that at least a better band be engaged than the one we already have. Urge that no backward steps be taken. When the exposition is short on music, things advertised, let us be long on music, and if we cannot have a better organization, for the love of good music and music lovers let us keep the one we have."

The attraction of the musical department at the exposition this week, outside of the grand concert on Wednesday night, which is intended especially for the musicians, will be the great spectacular musical extravaganza, "Satanstoe," presented tomorrow night on the Plaza by the Bellested Concert band, Adelmann and his band, Major Sloan's Drum corps, a host of soldiers, members of the Grand Army of the United States, a high school band, a score of specialty acts and actresses, Spanish music, Spanish costumes, American uniforms, Indian braves, artillery, light and heavy, fireworks, and Old Glory. The story of the piece was printed in last Monday's Herald. It will be in the official program tomorrow night. Miss Silence Daley will play at today's concert at the Auditorium, which begins at 3 p. m. She is the talented young woman from Lincoln who made such a good impression at the "Satanstoe" concert. Her orchestral concert last season in the same place. THOMAS J. KELLY.

Miss Julia Officer, piano studio, Karbach block. Superintendent Wolfe of the public schools has prepared a list of boundaries for the different schools and pupils will be compelled to observe the same. Mr. Wolfe says that owing to the crowded condition of certain school buildings there may be some inconvenience to pupils at the opening of school on Monday. This, however, is not expected to last any length of time, as it is thought that the alterations of the buildings smoothly after the first day or two. The Board of Education has rented several rooms in order to provide for the increase in the number of pupils, but more rooms are still being sought. An effort is now being made by Superintendent Wolfe and the members of the board to accommodate all the children and it is believed that school patrons will appreciate these efforts even though the results are not entirely satisfactory to every individual. Did Not Attempt Suicide. Thomas Brodner, a well known plumber of South Omaha, takes exception to a published item that appeared Saturday stating that he had attempted suicide by drinking some carbolic acid. Mr. Brodner states he took the acid by mistake, thinking that it was castor oil. He says that three of his children are sick with diphtheria and he got some carbolic acid with which to disinfect his house, but mistaking the bottle for castor oil he took the one containing the acid that he made a mistake. Dr. Schindel was called and administered soothing potions and Mr. Brodner is all right once more. He says he never once thought of committing suicide.

King's Daughters' Social. The social of the King's Daughters of the Presbyterian church, held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. M. After refreshments and recitations the singing of hymns and songs with guitar accompaniment, the proceeds were voted to the church treasury to help defray the expenses of the church.

Miss Julia Officer, piano studio, Karbach block. Superintendent Wolfe of the public schools has prepared a list of boundaries for the different schools and pupils will be compelled to observe the same. Did Not Attempt Suicide. Thomas Brodner, a well known plumber of South Omaha, takes exception to a published item that appeared Saturday stating that he had attempted suicide by drinking some carbolic acid. Mr. Brodner states he took the acid by mistake, thinking that it was castor oil. He says that three of his children are sick with diphtheria and he got some carbolic acid with which to disinfect his house, but mistaking the bottle for castor oil he took the one containing the acid that he made a mistake. Dr. Schindel was called and administered soothing potions and Mr. Brodner is all right once more. He says he never once thought of committing suicide.

equal of Bellested, and one band manager is now securing names to a petition to be presented to the management asking that a contract be made with his band for the closing month. The band is fairly good, not a great deal better than some we have in Omaha. Mr. Editor, please use your great influence in urging that at least a better band be engaged than the one we already have. Urge that no backward steps be taken. MUSIC.

If the present scheme for a choral-orchestral organization goes through it is an assured fact that Omaha will be musically this season. Mr. George Holbrook, the former successful secretary of the Apollo club, and a student of twenty-five years, formulated a plan whereby a successful permanent organization can be put up. The membership will be limited to forty instrumentalists, professional and advanced amateurs (if arranged) and 100 vocalists, professional, semi-professional and advanced amateurs. The concerts will be given regularly and will be of various natures. The first concert will be taken up will be, in all probability, "St. John's Eve," a beautiful and somewhat difficult work by Frederic Cowen. An admission fee will be charged and will be redeemable in tickets, so that a member can either give away tickets to his friends or dispose of them on the market, thereby refunding to himself his cash subscription. Any one interested in this movement and anxious to be identified with it will help matters by coming on the market inside the next week to Hesper's music store, addressed Street Apollo Choral-Orchestral Society. Those who are interested in music, but who are not singers or players, will be received as honorary members and will be given the same privileges as those who are for the press committee, program and printing committee, seat sale committee and others to be formed. Now is the time to get one long, strong pull in the direction of good music. Who will be the first to cooperate in the work of trying to rise above the "Coke-walk-Blowing-up-of-the-Maine-Little White standard?" Of course, we must look for opposition from those who should be first to help. That is, from the professional money-grubbers, who are those who will stand aside and try to draw others aside. Some will try to prevent their pupils from joining a society for the promotion of the best in art. Well, there were some who did this when they were building the ark, but later they were very anxious to get in out of the wet. This movement is non-partisan absolutely. It must be so, for the reason that there has as yet been no committee appointed. It is intended for a big, broad, generous scheme, which will embrace Omaha, Council Bluffs, South Omaha, Papillion, and members from Chicago or San Francisco will not be excluded. There is no reason why professional musicians in Omaha, and some in Council Bluffs and South Omaha, should not be on some committee.
