fall helpless upon the snow and are finall; entombed in the ice. In the course of time billions of them have been the victims of this glacier. They are, of course, carried by the ice river down into the valley and de posited at the melting edge of the ice and Mr. Kimball says that thousands of tons of grasshopper remains are the principal ma erial at the lower edge of the glacier. We hear very often of rocks and sand as forming the terminal moraine of glaciers, but here is a glacier whose principal morainal

The grasshoppers permeate the glacier from top to bottom. No fragment of ice can be broken so small as not to ontain remains. Most of the insects have been reduced to a coarse powder and the furrows of them washed out by the runlets and naturally disposed in parallel lines are very dark in color.

ZANGWILL ON NIAGARA.

the Great Falls Appear to the Novelist's Eyes. The impressions of Mr. Zangwill upon seeing Niagara Falls are thus given through Peloni, a quaint adventurer and regenerator of Israel, in the story called "Noah's Ark" in Lippincott's for August:

While the little monument was building, and the men were coming to and fro in boats, Peloni made friends with the Indians, the smoke-wreaths of whose lodges hovered across the river, and he picked up a little of their language. Also he explored his island, drawn by the crescendo roar of Ningara. It was at Burnt Island bay that he had his first, if distant, view of the falls themselves. The rapids, gurgling and plunging with foam and swirl and eddy, quickened his blood, but the cataracts disappointed him, after that rainbow glimpse
