> Cornelius Vanderbilt was born on Staten teland November 27, 1843. William H. Vanderbilt, his father, was at that time a farmer and Cornelius, at the age of 16, left school and secured a place as messenger in the Shoe and Leather bank. His grandfather, the commodore, learning of this sent for him and asked why he had not applied to him for a place. "Because I did not want to ask you for anything," was the reply.

This pleased the commodore, and it is

The young man was making $60 a month and declined to leave his place unless he got more money. He was given $65 and accepted it. He was then about 21 years old. The first place he was given was that of assistant treasurer of the New York &

Harlem railroad. His rise was rapid and he succeeded his father as head of the Vanderbilt system. Mr. Vanderbilt's active career was practically closed when he suffered a paralytic

Despite his enormous business interests he found time to devote to church and Sunday-school work, which he began early in life. He gave freely to the railroad branch of the Young Men's Christian assoctation and to the work of St. Bartholomew's Protestant Episcopal church in New York City.

Mr. Vanderbilt's great business cares made his life necessarily methodical and he was noted for his punctuality. Mr. Vanderbilt went to Europe last spring and came home on June 24, accompanied Mrs. Vanderbilt and his daughter, Gladys. They went to Newport the same day and Mr. Vanderbilt improved constantly in his health. On August 5 he gave a house party at his home, The Breakers. The last social affairs in The Breakers were upon the departure of Alfred Vanderbilt for a round-the-world trip. He left for Seattle on July 26, accompanied by William Proudfit Burden, Ernest Iselin and Douglas H. Cochran.

Leaves Five Children. Mr. Vanderbilt left five children-Cornelius, Gertrude, Alfred, Reginald and Gladys. Cornelius married a daughter of R. T. Wilson, the banker, about two years ago and later Gertrude became the wife of Harry Payne Whitney, son of former Secretary of the Navy William C. Whitney.

William K., Frederick W. and George are the surviving brothers of Cornelius Vanderbilt. After the first stroke of paralysis, Mr. Vanderbilt leased a residence in Washington, D. C., and upon advice of his physiclans lived there for three months, refraining from entertaining, however, and living very quietly. His sojourn in Washington was of raident benefit, and upon his return to his home in this city in April 1897, he appeared to many of his friends to be the Western Conference of the German daughter Gladys and his son Reginald were nearly as strong and as well as he ever had been. Plans were made for a trip to Europe in the following month.

In the months following his departure his friends were delighted by letters describing his health as steadily growing firmer, and said that his physicians had consented to his returning home to the autumn, but with the proviso that he must for an indefinite time content himself with a very general tems, and relinquish entirely the detail work which he had previously taken himself. His promised return upon this time did not take place however. Either inclination or a change of opinion on the part of his physicians of

He remained in Paris most of the time until December, when he went to Marseilles and there went aboard his yacht for a leisurely winter cruise across the Mediterranean to Algerian and other North African ports, afterward proceeding up the Nile. On the journey he was accompanied by Dr. Charcot, and he was not then expected to return to the United States until the summer of 1898.

Chauncey M. Depew, speaking of Mr Vanderbilt, said "Mr. Vanderbilt and I were the most intimate friends. We were on intimate terms for thirty years. He was a most bright-minded man on all questions. He felt the great responsibilities of his work and believed he owed obligations to all. He besteved he should be an active citizen in all matters and gave much attenon to public affairs.

> Similar concentrated accumulations o bones of larger recent mammals have been found in certain districts of east Africa. This mammoth ivory, far from being recent discovery, was known to the ancients and has been used for centuries as the article of commerce and manufacture The records show that as early as 1821 ivory of this kind to the extent of 20,000 pounds was marketed in Yakutsk, and that annual sales in that city from 1825 to 1831 averaged over 60,000 pounds. In 1840 Dr. Middendorff, who visited the vast territory, estimated that the annual output of Si berian ivory reached 110,000 pounds, representing at least 100 individual mammoths Baron Nordenskjold estimated in 1875 that fully 20,000 Siberian mammoths had con-
