all of the troops and the thousands of people on the ground united in giving three thousand cheers. Colonel Mulford then stepped up to the bandstand and, facing the governor, said: "I return to the state the battle flags given us here sixteen months ago by Governor Holcomb. Governor Holcomb has done so. I take good care of them and we have done so. It is true that all parts of the flags are not here, but I can assure you that the missing pieces are not in the possession of the enemy."

HER CONFIDENCE MISPLACED

Touching Story of a Coqueting Girl, a Bartender and a Missing Pocketbook.

Lyman Cole, a bartender at Twenty-fourth and Lake streets, was placed in the city jail early this morning on a charge of drunkenness. But if the story told by Frances M. Muff be true, there is a more serious side to the trouble that will have an airing later.

But if the story told by Frances M. Muff be true, there is a more serious side to the trouble that will have an airing later. The girl, who says she is a domestic employed at 215 Sherman avenue, told her story to John Foley, a special policeman, Thursday night between hysterical sobs.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 14.—The Brooklyn team today captured the series from Pittsburgh and captured the series by eight to six. With the exception of the fourth inning McJames pitched a star game in the first, striking out eight men. Williams was a particular mark, fanning out four times, despite his home run over the fence. Leever was hit hard and was succeeded by Gray, who gave Brooklyn two runs on a wild pitch, and then did good work. In the second game Kennedy was in fine form, while Hoffer was called in timely fashion. The game was halted in the seventh on account of darkness.

PLAYING GOLF FOR CHAMPIONSHIP. Long List of Entries at the Baltimore Tournament.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 14.—Owing to the large number of starters in the open golf championship, which began at the Country Club today, the first drive of the ball had the first pair drive off at half past 7 o'clock. The weather was perfect. James Foulis of Chicago and David Hunter of Boston were the first to tee off. Foulis was the first man to find the bunker protecting the first green. The hole cost him 11 strokes.

Forty Thousand People Turn Out to See the Trotting Races.

MILWAUKEE, Sept. 14.—The largest crowd in the history of the state fair, estimated at 40,000, gathered today at the Milwaukee track to witness the races. The track was faultless and good time was made in all the heats. Close finishes were the order throughout. Three events were particularly interesting. The first was the 230 yards, E. S. Curry's Ina King of Pergus won by a margin of 1/2 length. The second, closely pushed by Princess Dora, who came in second in each heat. The 230 yards was won by the Duke of Montpelier, Liege of Elgin, III., with Clara Kimball and Silver Wilkes close up. Three heats were run in the 230 yards. The first set in and the event was left unfinished. Several of the horses in this race were held out for not appearing on the track in time.

Racing at Sioux City. SIoux CITY, Sept. 14.—(Special Telegram.)—The race between the great pacers, Joe Patchen and John R. Brown, was the feature of the day at the Sioux City track today. The race was a close one, with Patchen leading for most of the distance. The race was won by Patchen in 2:04 1/2. A high wind was blowing and in the back stretch the horses had to go in the mud. The race was a very exciting one and a dusty track better time would have been made. The race was won on this same track three years ago in 2:02.

EXPORT EXPOSITION OPENS

Philadelphia's Show Begins with Singing of "The Star Spangled Banner."

THOUSANDS PASS THE GATES BEFORE NOON

Ceremonies Begin with Landing of Sausages—Greetings from the President—Speeches by Stone and Hepburn.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 14.—With ceremonies unattended by ostentation the National Export Exposition was formally opened at noon today. Distinguished visitors from all sections of the country were in attendance, including representatives of the diplomatic corps, officers of the army and navy, scientists and business and professional men. After the benediction by Archbishop O'Brien, which concluded the dedicatory exercises, a message was received from President McKinley extending greetings and officially opening the great exposition. When the message had been read the chorus of voices and the audience sang "The Star Spangled Banner," accompanied by the United States Marine band and the big exposition organ.

The exhibition grounds were opened to the public at 8 o'clock this morning, and long before noon thousands of people had passed through the gates. The dedicatory ceremonies were held in the immense auditorium, which was crowded to its capacity.

The first event of the day was the landing of public Sausages, and officers of his squadron at Chestnut street. Carriages were in waiting and the naval officers were Ashbridge's office they met Governor Stone and his staff, the officers and directors of the National Export museum, the officers and managers of the Franklin Institute, various railway officials and about 100 other prominent men of Philadelphia and other cities.

Exercises at the Grounds. Subsequently the company in the mayor's office re-entered the carriages and were escorted by a platoon of mounted police and 750 marines from the North Atlantic squadron.

Arriving at the grounds the distinguished guests were escorted to the platform in the presence of P. A. B. Widener, president of the exposition, and first vice president, W. W. Foulkrod, delivered the address turning the exposition over to the governor of Pennsylvania. Director General W. P. Wilson delivered an address on the "Importance, Purpose, Plan and Scope of the Exposition."

Challenge to the World. Governor Stone said, in part: "Gentlemen: The National Export exposition makes its bow to the world and invites inspection of exhibits. It is the result of the work of two great Philadelphia institutions, the Philadelphia museum and Franklin Institute. Its object is to increase the exports of this country. It has invited foreign governments and foreign merchants to come and inspect our wares and their prices. By the exhibition this country throws down the gauntlet to the world and challenges any and all countries to produce articles as good and as cheap as those exhibited here. They are not confined to any particular line, but cover manufactured articles from a button to a locomotive. Ladies and gentlemen, we sell the world our products if we can offer the best goods for the least money. The trade between nations is not regulated by sentiment or patriotism, but by its own natural law. We have the largest export trade of any country in the world, our exports of manufactured articles now averaging $1,000,000 in value per day.

"We are selling our goods in every country on the globe for the reason and the only reason that we sell a better article for less money than any other country can sell. We want the world's trade, and our demand is supported alone by the merit of our products. For years the protectionists of this country have claimed that its protective tariffs upon imports would foster and build up home industries, would encourage capitalists to invest in manufacturing plants to supply home consumers with their products, and that with the increase in these industrial plants there would come such sharp competition as to reduce the price to consumers below what it would be under free trade. The claims of the protectionists have been realized. Protective tariffs in this country have transformed the competition between importers under free trade to the home producer has a guaranty that he will sell a better article for less money than any other country can sell. The home consumer has his goods at greatly reduced prices, some of them for less than the tariff on similar imported articles. Our industries have outgrown the wants of the country, and our products are now competing with the foreign purchaser, not in our own territory, but in his. This foreign demand has relieved the pressure here and helped prices. We are fairly in the race for the world's trade.

"The great problem with our manufacturers has been to preserve and maintain our high prices paid for labor and still undersell our foreign competitors. This has been done without decreasing the quality of our products. The average price of labor in the country is double that of any other country in competition with us, and as labor is the principal cost in any product, this has been a difficult obstacle to overcome, but the question has been solved by the genius and skill of the American mechanic and inventor. Americans have had faith in the future of their country and did not hesitate to invest their money freely for the best plants possible and plants of a permanent character.

"American workmen have much to do with our ability to export, because although they receive on an average more than double the wages per day they turn out more goods than any other country. They adapt themselves to conditions foreign workmen will not. They have never opposed the introduction of modern methods of labor-saving devices, as they do abroad. Their work is light as a consequence, but above all their characteristic energy, adaptability, spirit and ingenuity, and opportunity to advance have advanced American manufacture and made it possible to export. They are not mere machines, but men who think. Many of our best machines and improvements come from workmen in humble employment.

"Our only drawback is shipping facilities. We have protected and fostered our industry, but we have neglected our shipping. Today our exports are carried in foreign ships and we are paying $100,000,000 each year to foreign shipowners. This is a reflection on our statesmanship. It ought not to be. Our ocean freight should be carried in American ships. If the circumstances do not justify the construction of American ships in American docks congress should by subsidy or otherwise make it an inducement to capital to embark in this enterprise. Our flag should be more often seen flying from the masts of our ships and our nation should appear abroad what it really is at home.

Major Ashbridge accepted the exposition from the governor and then Congressman W. P. Hepburn of Iowa, chairman of the congressional committee on interstate and foreign commerce, delivered the oration of the day. He said in part: "A government in which the political power is in the hands of its citizens derives its right to endure from the consent of the majority. This is marked true in our government. Our institutions, our social order, our recognition of property rights can only endure so long as the people who possess political power—who exercise the right to vote—are contented with them. When ever a large majority become dissatisfied with them and desire a change a change will be effected.

"So long as the homes of the laboring masses are homes of contentment, our political power will regard their government with all of its institutions, as the best on earth. "There are 15,000,000 people in the United States who labor, who earn wages, who aid in creating wealth. Fifteen millions of people are dependent upon the political power of the nation. The perpetuity of this government is dependent upon keeping this great army of laborers employed, and being employed, content.

"The demands of agriculture will not enlarge the nation's labor field to any extent, owing to the use of improved machinery which diminishes the aggregate of human labor on the farm. To manufacture and commerce the people must look for increased employment. Even this field is limited, owing to the introduction of inventions, but more especially because of the want of markets. Unlimited markets will solve all the questions of labor and wages which come as a fact.

"We are selling many millions' worth of manufactures abroad, more than we buy," he continued, "but to keep our people employed we must do more. And again I say that the necessity to keep them employed is the greatest question before us, and that it can only be solved by securing our full share of trade in the markets of the world. And in efforts to secure it we must meet and overcome the fiercest rivalry of the great nations. These nations are now engaged in a struggle for the world's trade, and as many as that have ever engaged the martial spirit of men.

"We have met here today to inaugurate what I believe will be one of the most important aids to the American manufacturer and trader in conducting his business in the commerce of the world. What modern times are, what a battleship is in martial contests, this export exposition that is opened today is to be to us in our efforts to secure our rightful share of foreign commerce. It might well be called a university of commerce.

The benediction was pronounced by Archbishop Ryan of this city and at its conclusion President McKinley's message was read and the National Export exposition began.

At the conclusion of the exercises the auditorium was thrown open to the public and the prominent guests inspected the buildings, grounds and exhibits.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 14.—At 2:15 today President McKinley at the White House pressed the telegraph key which started the machinery at the Philadelphia Export exposition. There were no incidental ceremonies.

MURKIN'S DANCE. ST. LOUIS, Sept. 14.—Miss Anna Russell Allen of this city, whose marriage to the Duke of Montpelier, Liege of Elgin, III., was announced today, is a daughter of the late Bradford Allen, principal owner of the Southern hotel, and a granddaughter of a city who is an attorney. Last Saturday Miss Allen brought suit through her brother against William H. Bondurant, a St. Louis circuit court for the recovery of $50,000, which she alleges was given in trust to her father by her mother, Mrs. Bondurant, in 1888, for her 18th birthday. She is now a year or two past that age.

Beer Declines Nomination. BOSTON, Sept. 14.—(Special Telegram.)—Baer, secretary of the Society of Christian Endeavor, addressed a letter today to F. W. Clarke of Philadelphia, in which he declined the prohibition state convention in Worcester, declining his nomination for governor. Secretary Baer gives no reason for his declination.

Joseph Allen Hanged. HELENA, Mont., Sept. 14.—Joseph Allen was hanged at the county jail at 6:30 this morning. Allen was found guilty in a murder case. His partner in the crime, Fred J. Reynolds, his partner in the sheep shearing business, July 17, 1888.

Problem for Manufacturers. "The great problem with our manufacturers has been to preserve and maintain our high prices paid for labor and still undersell our foreign competitors. This has been done without decreasing the quality of our products. The average price of labor in the country is double that of any other country in competition with us, and as labor is the principal cost in any product, this has been a difficult obstacle to overcome, but the question has been solved by the genius and skill of the American mechanic and inventor.
