Sons of a Mighty Race.

From this little band of explorers sprung a mighty race that swept all before it. Their mighty king, Ak-Sar-Ben I, was a man o determination, yet still he was a man whose voice was always lifted for peace. He was an agriculturist and taught the people the arts of tilling the soil instead of the arts of war and ever since the subjects of the kingdom have been engaging in pursuits tending to add to the commerce of the realm and the general good of the country They have set before the people of the world the symbols of all the gracious goodness and for years have made the Indian corn toss its tassels in the south breezes and turn to gold at harvest time.

Each time that an Ak-Sar-Ben king has marched into the chosen city of the kingdom he and his followers have been me with cheers and glad acclaim and each time the capitulation has been complete, the popu lance recognizing him as a friend instead of an enemy. These kings of the Ak-Sar-Ber line have taught the people of Quivera th art of raising grain sufficient to supply the markets of the world; they have taught them that Ak-Sar-Ben corn, which brings the highest prices not only in the United States but in the ports of the old world, is hurried on great trains to the seaboard and sent abroad to feed the rich and poor, the young and the old.

And for this reason when an Ak-Sar-Be king knocks at the outer gates of the city of Omaha there is no replning over past losses, but instead, each man, woman and child halls with give the approach of the monarch and bids him welcome. On each recurring occasion the people crowd the streets, doff their head gear and bid the mighty ruler welcome.

MEETS WITH GENEROUS GREETING

King's March Through the Streets is

One Continuous Ovation. The great event of carnival week is always the Ak-Sar-Ben parade, when the king arrives and takes possession of the keys to the gates of the city. This parade is always made up of floats drawn by richly caparisoned horses, 1 through the stree's by slaves. On one of these floats rides the cing, while on others ride loyal subjects who in one way or another illustrate lessons that are to be taught. At the head of each of the kingly parades a platoon of police clear the way and behind them follow the members of the Board of Governore of the order of the Knights of Ak-Sar-Ben while about and among the fl ats are numerous knights, uniformed in the costliest of raiment, riding Nebraska horses, which are recognized as the best in all the markets of the world. With each parade there are bands which are the best that can be cured and the members of these organiza tions always render their choicest relections as they pass along the streets. this respect last night's parade did not differ from its predecessors.

The jackles today got the medals which congress voted them, and proudly displayed them to the visitors until Jeffries, the pugilist, came aboard. Jack loves a fighter, and while the big slugger was aboard the tars were oblivious to all else.

Owing to the stream of official visitors, the roar of salutes continued almost without interruption all day. Major General Nelson A. Miles, at the head of the Washington committee, called to submit the program for the national reception at Washington and Major General Merritt and his staff, stiff with gold braid, came over to officially welcome Dewey in the name of the army. They were received with all the honors befitting their rank, but the climax was not reached until Governor Roosevelt came down the bay in the afternoon on the yacht Wild Duck. He was accompanied by General Francis V. Greene, some officers of the New York naval militia, and several of Dewey's captains at Manila, including Captain Dyer of the Baltimore, Captain Wilder of the Boston and Captain Walker of the While much powder was flung into smoke down the bay today, much more will be burned during the great naval parade up the Hudson. The marine parade, unless it is marred by bad weather, which the local forecaster unfortunately predicts, is expected to eclipse all naval parades on this side of the ocean.

The parade will move at 1 o'clock in four divisions. First will come the warships, headed by the Olympia and flanked on either side by the torpedo boats. They will be followed by a fleet of white revenue cutters. Following these will be the steam yachts in double column, led by the Corsair, the flagship of the New York Yacht club. To Sir Thomas Lipton's Erin has been accorded the honor of heading the starboard column of this division. There will be 187 yachts
