The first portion of the season will be spent in training the men to play straight, hard ball, without attempting any fancy formations. The development of kicking owers will continue as rapidly as the ability of the players will allow. The whole team lacks beef, but it is thought that by quick, aggressive playing this disadvantage may be overcome. A reasonably light team with a good active line is nearly always as good or better than a heavy team composed of slow players. The indications are that the men will be so close together in ability and weight that no one will tower over his fellow-players. What is known as "starplaying" will be eliminated as far as possible with the idea of increasing the standard of team-work. All of the candidates are

Kingsbury and Pillsbury, last year's tackles, are both out of the game, as are also Melford, Hansen and Turner, the three center men. For ends Liebman, Stringer and Cortelyou are training hard. The latter is a green player, but is developing good speed. Drain may be tried on one of the ends. For the three center positions the candidates are Plowhead, Tyson, Dasenbrock, Ringer, Wallace, Koehler and Hewitt. Tyson, Wallace,
