About fifteen years ago Watson Ham se cured a ranch on the Missouri river about thirty miles south of Chamberlain and invested about $10,000 in cattle. He has since extended his ranch to the west side of the river and has one of the best equipped ranges to be found anywhere in the northwest. His property is estimated at anywhere from $50,000 to $75,000. Among the men who commenced on noth ing but a goodly stock of muscle, intelligence and ten horses is W. H. Place, who about six years ago drifted from this place to Jackson county. He was in town the other day and stated that he had been of fered $18,000 for his bunch of cattle, but refused the offer. Another of the cattle kings of Jackson county is a man named Duchelmmer. He has just marketed a fine bunch of steers here and his friends say he has between $30,000 and $40,000 worth more at home.

H. V. Sears, who began about six years ago, has since cleared $12,000 from the investment over and above all expenses. H. B. days ago he cut his foot with a rusty hoe, but the wound healed rapidly and he gave it no further thought. Two or three days ago he was taken with cramps in his foot, which later extended to his limbs and spine, accompanied with lockjaw. He died after terrible suffering.

Some time ago a small pimple appeared on a finger of Mrs. I. N. Griffith, a ploneer of Brandon township, this county. A few days ago it itched and she opened it. The finger soon became inflamed and began to swell, paining her considerably. Blood poison set in, causing her death this morning.

Two Church Meetings at Yankton. E. Park died this morning of consumption YANKTON, S. D., Oct. 2 .- (Special.)-The Yankton Association of Congregational Churches will hold its annual meeting here Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, and many ministers from neighboring towns will be present. There will also be a meeting of this wonderful machine? leaders. St. Louis, Kansas City and Milwaukee have delegations here and en route to work for the democratic national convention. The day opened cool and bright. While the prospective arrival of Mr. Bryan kept many in town during the morning, the state fair grounds early showed signs of the great crowd that had gathered to hear such a flood of democratic oratory as had never been heard in Texas before.

Meetings were arranged for the morning, afternoon and evening, each with its attractions of national leaders. There was no end of enthusiasm and each speaker was made to feel that his words for the democratic cause had fallen upon willing ears. In order to accommodate the immense crowds the place of speaking was changed from the auditorium to the race track grand stand. Mr. Bryan arrived at the grounds shortly after 10 o'clock and was accorded a great ovation. Among those who surrounded him on the speaker's stand were O. H. P. Belmont of New York, Governor Sayers of Texas, ex-Senator Reagan and all of the Texas congressional delegation. The next important arrival was Governor Stone of Missouri, who was received with cheers. Chairman George Carden introduced Gov ernor Stone at 11:15 a. m. and he addreesed the audience.

Governor Stone's speech was frequently pplauded. The new speaker was Governor Jones of Arkansas. At the conclusion of the Arkansas governor's speech the morning meeting was adjourned.

At the conclusion of Governor Jones' adiress the crowd went frantic in their demand for Mr. Bryan. Mr. Bryan advanced and in a short speech said that while his time for speaking had not yet arrived he could not allow an opportunity to escape without extending his thanks for this magnificent reception. As a return he would request the democratic president of 1901 to set apart a day for the reception of the democracy of Texas at the White house. Congressman Bailey, democratic leader of the house, and Senator Chilton followed. The inner wheel in the carnival is the senatorial race in Texas. Senator Chilton will stand for re-election and it is generally understood that Bailey will oppose him At the afternoon meeting the crowds were larger if anything than in the morning. General Cabell presided and introduced Champ Clark of Missouri.

Congressman Hugh Dinsmore of Arkaneas was the next speaker. He was followed by ex-Congressman Alva Adams of Colorado This closed the afternoon session. At night there was a large procession com posed of the labor organizations of Dallas After the procession had passed, the night
