EXPANSION'S COMMERCIAL SIDE SET FORTH

A. W. Jefferls Makes an Eloquent Plea for the Fing Stretching Out Its Folds-Other Speeches on Prosperity.

Republican speeches, ringing with patriotism, furnished entertainment for those who attended the meeting of the Seventh Ward Republican club Wednesday night. Short addresses were made by Judge Slabaugh, George McBride, D. M. Haverly, D. M. Vinsonhaler and Irving G. Baright. All spoke encouragingly of the progress of the campaign. Judge Slabaugh ventured the opinion that Douglas county would roll up a republican majority of 2,000. Mr. Baright told an entertaining incident which had come under his observation during the campaign. A prominent contractor in the Fifth ward, with whom the republican candidate for district court was not acquainted, partially promised to support one of the fusion candidates. He is an intense republican and an ardent supporter of McKinley. Today he employes more than fifty men, while three years ago he, himself, was part of the time out of employment. When he was shown that support given any member of the fusion county ticket, which might enable him to be elected, would make the election of William McKinley next year just that much harder, he appreciated the significance of loyal support of the entire ticket and promised to give it his cordial support and influence.

Captain H. E. Palmer read a letter from a personal friend, who is at the head of one of the largest manufacturing establishments in New England, employing 9,000 men. This man was formerly a stalwart democrat. In 1896 his factory was closed for sixty days at a stretch and when it was in operation worked only half the time. Since the election of William McKinley this man has become a republican. He writes that prosperity was never greater in New England than at the present time. His mill is running at its full capacity, the railroads are all busy and the merchants are happy and prosperous. He expresses the hope that Bryan will not succeed in scuttling the ship, and states that the intention of the east is to relegate him to a political grave. Captain Palmer remarked that the situation in the west was improved equally as much as that in the east and considers this a harbinger of re-

Advantages of Expansion.

The principal address was delivered by A. W. Jefferis. He spoke of the effort being made to alienate the affections of the people from the flag just as such a similar attompt was made in 1860-65. He spoke of the history of the United States, calling that country. Judge Baker declared it to attention to the advancement made by the stitutions. He cited the absolute certainty of similar action with regard to the Filipinos. The republican party, he said, has no intention of establishing a serfdom in the Philippines, as the anti-administration orators would have people believe. It intends to give them the opportunity for selfgovernment just as rapidly as they are able to assume the responsibilities. Mr. Jefferis laid special stress upon the importance of the Philippines as an industrial factor. England, Germany and Russia are reaching out for trade in China, Japan and the Orient. The United States, with ingenuity, wealth prosperity and commercial integrity and influence, has the opportunity to forge to the front as the greatest commercial nation of the world and at the same time educate the people of the new islands in the arts and sciences.

However, he declared that fortune has smiled on the people and that the wheels of factories are whirling as never before. After this he launched off onto the question of imperialism and expressed fears that the time will come when the American people will have cause to regret the Cuban and Philippine campaigns. He blamed President McKinley for the war with Spain and the days preceding election with Bryan in Dougincrease of the strength of the army.

Second ward democrats and furionists at tempted to hold a meeting Wednesday night in a store room at 1441 South Sixteenth street, but the effort was frostbitten. The attendance was noticeably light and leaders seemed to be lacking. There was no enthuslasm whatever and it was by difficult work that any speeches were drawn from the cured Doan's Kidney Pills at Kuhn & Co.'s crowd. A member of the slight audience called the meeting to order and introduced E. T. Youngfelt, democratic candidate for county surveyor. Finds His Only Refuge from Sharp Questions Behind Judge Gordon.

REAL ANIMUS HIS ENMITY FOR WHITE

Testifies that His Duty is Not the Same Under All Circumstances-Outside Persuasion the Cause of Sudden Change of Heart.

If the kernel of the nut failed to come o light in the Shukert case Wednesday aft- care to go into the matter. rnoon it was because the questions put to County Attorney Shields by the attorneys for the defendants struck too close home to suit the witness. When the attorneys tried to shed some light on Shields' real molive in refusing to dismiss the suspects after he had promised to do so the witness retired behind the skirts of the court, where he found secure refuge.

When the attorneys for the defense in sisted on a right to go into the matter of the county attorney's change of heart in full detail, the court suddenly awoke to the fact that certain matters must not be brought into the case, notwithstanding the fact that previously the bars had been let down completely and all kinds of evidence admitted.

The promise of the authorities to release the suspects up to that time had been the chief feature of the trial, but the court proected the county attorney from answering questions too searching and directed too straight at the foundation of the whole conroversy, namely, the cue Shields got from the World-Herald to hold the prisoners to nake them serve political ends,

County Attorney Shields even went se far as to admit that in the hour or two that elapsed between the time he gave Captain Donahue his promise and the time he changed his mind about the dismissal he talked about the case with persons entirely outside of it and, as he said, not concerned in it at all. Who these persons were he declined to reveal and the court ruled that he need not do so. He made the most insulting insinuations against Chief White and then refused to give any basis for them of show that he had any. He admitted that he did not like Chief White, but the attorneys were not allowed by the court to g into this and show to what an extent it affected his official intercourse with him.

But the objections of his deputy and the rulings of the court combined did not suffice to prevent Shields from making the ages, to aid you in judging the evidence?" stupid, although apparently entirely candid admission that in the Shukert case his dislike of the chief deterred him from doing his plain duty, which would have been to go to the chief and consult him about the strength of the evidence when doubts first came into his mind about the advisability of dismissing the men

Where Shields Fell Down.

The county attorney exhibited again the extreme uselessness of his memory in reto the defense. It was brought out that he did not remember how many times he had talked to Shukert. At first he confessed to but two interviews. Then when his recollection was stimulated with questions he admitted one by one four more, finishing with the statement that there might have been half a dozen. Thus his assertion that he had not talked to Shukert about the promise of immunity to the prisoners until the day previous to the chief's deparure for Chicago was shown to be either willfully false or uttered in ignorance. But he interesting part of his testimony came Taking his cue from this Assistant County Attorney Dunn objected to the question and the attorneys on both sides grew angrily insistent. The court said he did not want t go into the matter.

"But I want to go into it, if your hono please," exclaimed Chief White. "I am not afraid to have anything in this case brought out and, after all that has been said, it is only justice to go to the bottom

After more angry passages the defense withdrew the question and, when the exami nation was resumed, proceeded on anothe line. At this point the court made a state ment that it was not necessary to go into al the features of the case, some of which has been added to it by the papers.

"I wish to state this to the court," began Chief White. "Mr. Shields is playing to the accused in their cell, but he had heard public and he is allowed to get into his testimony just enough to insinuate that I would do things no other police officer in the counthe very evident reason that he was provided try would do. Now the prosecution has with wheels in his head. He made the looked up my whole life and if they had found anything damaging they would have officer in civilian dress as one of the suspublished it. I have been on trial in this case, not in the mind of the court, but in the public mind, and in tha of the presecuting attorney. That's why I in sist on going into this matter fully."

Mr. Shields replied to this by denying that he was playing to the public and saying that it was his duty to prosecute if there was any evidence. Attorney Kelkenney then resumed his examination of Shields.

One other passage in the county attorney's testimony was important as showing calling any particular circumstance of value good grounds for the belief that he was persuaded to hold the men by persons not interested in the case. His change of heart was confined to a period of about an hour's length, as he himself testified, and during that time he left his office, went to his home and ate dinner. Being forced to do so by the questions of Attorney Kelkenney, witness admitted that he had talked about the case on the way home to persons not connected with it. The defense insisted on going into this matter and compelling witness to name the persons, but the court sustained the objections of the assistant county attorney, saying that the county atwhen the workings of his mind were traced was supposed to do his duty. It was therethrough the period in which he broke his; fore not necessary to go into his motives. Both sides then rested the case. Chief

Learning that a close aristocracy had grown up within the school and an objectionable variety of snobbishness was being cultivated, the principal informed the members that they must open their ranks to any girl who wished to drill, or else they must disband. The girls took off their accoutrements of war, though it is said they still cherish the seeds of hostility in their hearts. This is but one of many changes made in the High school by the new principal, some others being in regard to the monthly reports to the parents of pupils. Formerly these gave simply the grades of the pupil in the different studies but a new form has been provided, which shows the general characteristics of the pupil's work, his conduct and other points of a similar nature.
