John Dripps, the former husband of Miss Williams, was on the stand most of the afternoon as a witness for the state. His evidence, however, tended to help the case of the defense more than that of the prosecution. APPEAL IN HIGH SCHOOL CASE.

superintendent this morning. It in part is as follows: 'We pecessarily enter upon the discussion of this case with the full understanding that this court has once been convinced that the board of directors committed a grievous error in selecting a school house site. Were it so that a different tribunal must be appealed to for a reversal of that decision the former opinion would have great weight in the further progress of the hearing, happily a petition for rehearing is presented to the same court for a revisal of his finding. The decision is as clearly wrong as it is unsatisfactory to the patrons of our schools." County Superintendent Sawyer's familiar. ty with the facts and conditions involved is pointed out in substantiation of his decision. "In fact," says the petition, "no man connected with the case had the same opportunity to judge advisedly as he. Two voluntary petitions in bankruptcy This being the situation it is possible and were filed in the United States district perhaps probable that counsel presenting the case to a stranger to the facts on the same brief as in the court below did not Dohany opera house in this city, schedule present the details as clearly as same ought to have been done." In this connection the petition cites rea eons assigned for reversal of the county superintendent's decision. "One member of the board testifies that the most central location in the city is near Broadway and Pearl or Main street. Thus it appears to be the judgment of at least five of the seven members of the board that the Oakland site is not centrally located."

Mr. Stewart argues that it would cost at least $400,000 to condemn a site at this point and holds that the Oakland avenue site is nearest the desired point. The attention of the state superintendent is called to his error in stating that the Oakland avenue site is ten blocks north of the Street tract and he is reminded that it is not so much a question as to the distance between the two sites as it is the distance from a particular site to the accessible center of the district. Continuing, the petition says that the board has no quarrel with the court on the law of the case, agreeing that the authority of the board should be exercised with great care as to the convenience of the people, the geographical position and in harmony with the wishes of the electors. It is urged that the Oakland avenue site was so selected. The petition referrs to the pecuniary interest held in other sites by some of the active opponents to the one selected by the board and goes into details, giving names of those so interested. The petition concludes: "This court has the jurisdiction to say that this location is not central, but we have full confidence that this court desires to promulgate only such opinion as is in accord with justice and the facts in the case and in harmony with the Pearl Street, Council Bluffs, Iowa. | wishes of the people who pay for the building and are patrons of the school and interested in their welfare. We confidently | SENATOR IS A STAUNCH SHIP anticipate that a decision will be rendered promptly authorizing this board to proceed with its labor in erecting this building on the site selected, which we believe is the most available and certainly the best adapted for school purposes and the appeal should be dismissed and be determined to be without merit."

After his service at Omaha he was detailed to Yellowstone park in 1891 and 1892 in local charge of the improvement undertaken there by the government in order to afford tourists the best possible opportunity to observe the marvelous formations and phenomena which nature has so lavishly displayed over an area of 3,300 square miles. The government expends from $40,000 to $50,000 annually in constructing and maintaining roadways and other facilities for sightseers and Colonel Chittenden's office here will have supervision of this work, necessitating a journey to the park each summer.

BOSTON, Oct. 19.-The supposed suicide of an unknown woman, probably 50 years old, fashionably dressed and with an appearance of refinement, is engaging the attention of the police today. The woman was a passenger on board an East Boston ferrybote on its midnight trip. After the passengers had left the boat the boat hands found a woman's cape and handbag on a seaf in the boat. In the bag was a sealed envelope addressed to Mrs. B. I. Clark, general delivery, Worcester, Mass., and an track, but did not go through the unscaled letter, in which the writer said she saw nothing in life to keep her on earth and hill on the east side of the bridge and a race directed that if her body ever should be found the authorities should refer to Bishop the westbound passenger. The crest of the Potter of New York, who would see that it hill was reached and the train stopped just was buried.

"I do not wish," the letter said further, "to reveal my identity, for it would do no good and rob me entirely of the little comgoing around the wreck by way of Goldfield fort which I may find in death."

from Iowa Falls and back to Webster City In addition to these two letters there were found clippings from the San Francisco Call of September 25 giving the Oakland race course tips and several letters torn into small bits. Some of the pieces when placed together formed a part of a typewritten etter which read:
