ACTION MAKES ENEMIES FOR NEVILLE

Reliable Information from the Big Sixth Indicates that the Repub-Henn Party Stands a Good Chance of Winning.

LINCOLN, Oct. 27 .- (Special.) - According to the reported self-confessed statements of Walter B. McNeel, secretary of the democratic congressional convention of the Sixta district, the attempt to place Neville's name on the ticket as the democratic nominee for congress was made in the interests of W. J. Bryan as the presidential nominee in 1900. This somewhat sensational disclosure was made today in the county court in the case of Juan Boyle against Secretary of State Porter and in addition to the assertion relating to Bryan, McNeel is reported to have admitted that Neville was not the man for the democratic nomination.

The case came up before Judge Cochran on the order of the court for Secretary Porter to appear and show why the name of Neville should be certified as the demo-24 154 cratic nominee. Secretary Porter failed to appear as ordered, but was represented by A. S. Tibbetts. Juan Boyle was present with his attorney, A. J. Sawyer, and William | 74 | 74 | 3 ... | 59 | 211 | Neville was represented by his law partner, | 70 | 65 ... | 52 | 187 | A. F. Parsons. The attorney for the secretary of state raised the objection that the county judge was without jurisdiction to try the case, but this the court overruled. The last week. Juan Boyle presented a long 77 126 13 ... 97 313 petition containing over twenty distinct points in support of his assertions that no meeting of the congressional committee was held and further that it had no authority

Hinman of North Platte, in whose office the Totals .......... 1,100 1,505 2,605 men who appointed Neville met. He testified under oath that "at the time of the meeting of Messrs. McNeel and Boyle on the 9th day of October I met Mr. McNeel and Juan Boyle during the day and they were at my office during the day. In the evening, I should say about 6 o'clock, I went to Mr. Harrington's office in his store and they were there discussing the legality of the meeting that had been called. announced to the three-Harrington, Boyle and McNeel-that Mr. Neville had served five rears as register of the land office un appointment of Cleveland and that directly afterwards he was elected to the office of judge by the populists and democrats. nominated him-made the nominating speech -and that during that time he never had helped a democrat to anything. He employed a nephew, a republican, as clerk and stenographer during all that time and that f he went to congress no democrat would get anything. In Bryan's Interests.

"McNeel said very emphatically," the deposition continues, "'We know all that to be true,' but the substance of the balance was, 'We are working for Bryan's election next

"There were some other words," but I cannot give them all. All three-Harrington, Boyle and McNeel-said that they did not know of any resolution giving authority to the congressional committee to fill vacancies if any should occur in the nominee for congress in the Sixth congressional district; that some parties claimed that there had been such a resolution, but that they did not know of it."

Walter B. McNeel was put on the stand and questioned by Mr. Hinman. "Did I not also state that if Neville was elected to congress this time that he would icited for the petitions and instead of asked Mr. Hinman, "and that when he got senting the names in a single list there there the democrats of the Sixth district would not get a smell of any office; that they would all go to his nephews as they had

"I do not remember ever hearing his nephews mentioned," replied McNeel, evasively. Other testimony of Mr. McNeel concerning the minutes and proceedings of the convention was introduced, in which the deponent said that he had no record of a resolution authorizing the committee to fill vacancies. He also admitted that he had given the records to A. F. Parsons, Neville's attorney, to bring to Lincoln at the time of the hearing before Secretary of State Porter. When aeked who authorized him to call the congressional committee together October 9 at North Platte, he replied that he ssel on the rocks near the Manacles, off | called the meeting as a member of the committee, having no other authority.

Additional light was thrown upon the prospends the license of Captain Watkins for | ceedings of the convention by the deposimoths, dating from yesterday, October tion of Dr. B. F.
