(Copyright, 1899, by Press Publishing Co.) Cablegram-Special Telegram.) - Stevens cables the Daily Mail of the Ladysmith bombardment November 3:

The arrival of the naval brigade on Munday was most opportune. It would do you good to see the great-chested, bearded, steadfast men amid our army of boys. They did fine service yesterday, when they mounted their guns in record time and silenced a "Long Tom" at 6 o'clock. "Long Tom" was tried again, but the bluejackets again silenced him in the second round. We lost three wounded, including, unfortunately, an officer. "The feature of yesterday's fighting was the great variety of Boer guns disclosed. The effect of the eight hours artillery fight was terrible, though less deadly than the infantry combat. An incessant boom of guns and hiss and rattle of shells gave a particularly remorgeless impression and emphasized the helplessness of man before the deadly machines which he creates. This was heightened by the cloudless sunshine.

'The escape of one man from destruction by a bursting shell was very singular. The shell burst near him, turning one side of his bayonet into a complete corkscrew, a fragment of the shell piercing his water bottle on the other side, the man escaping unhurt. Some are disposed to criticise our artillery practice, but it must be remembered that the Boers' guns outrange ours."

First Report from Buller.

Over Eight Hundred Missing.

DURBAN, Natal, Nov. 2 .- (Delayed in Transmission.)-The official roll call shows that 843 members of the Gloucestershire regiment and of the Royal Irish Fusiliers are missing as the result of the engagement on Farquhar's farm. Thirty-two members of the Gloucestershire regiment, ten members of the Royal Irish Fusileers and two members of the Tenth mountain battery were found killed. Between seventy and 100 escaped and returned to Ladysmith, whither 150 wounded have been brought.

LONDON, Nov. 6 .- The general belief in London is that the Boers are now waiting for more guns from Pretoria before attacking Ladysmith.
