LOANS WITHOUT NOTES TAXED Commissioner Wilson of Internal Revenue Burenn Stops Banks

Wilson of the internal revenue bureau has decided that when banks loan money without taking promissory notes and specified collaterals are pledged as security for a certain and definite sum of money, as evi-etc., a tax accrues as a pledge. The question came up on a case in Philadelphia. When a specific loan is desired, the borrower either signs an application for a loan OMAHA & ST. The collaterals which the borrower has pledged are placed in an envelope, on the outside of which said collaterals are listed. The loan in detail is entered on the loan book of the bank and such other entries are made on the books as are necessary. This, it is stated, is the general method pursued by the banks in Philadelphia, as well as by the banks in New York In some instances no application for a loan is signed, and the collaterals are not listed on the outside of the envelope in which they are placed, but in all cases the collaterals pledged for any loan are either listed in detail on the outside of the envelope in which they are placed or on the lean book of the bank making the lean, but in no instance is a promissory note used. In a letter to the revenue agent at Philadelphia, Commissioner Wilson says: whether there are any taxable features in the manner of making loans as herein de-scribed the 'continuing agreement' should not be considered, as it does not refer to any single transaction between the bank and the borrower, but merely defines the cure any definite sum of money, this pledge is subject to taxation under the paragraph of schedule A above referred to, at the rate of 25 cents for each $500 or fraction thereof in excess of $1,000 of the amount secured."
