of the Regiment Meet Their Friends Once More After Weary Months of Exposure and Hard Fighting.

As the trains bearing the boys of the Fifty-first Iowa rolled over the bridge early Monday morning and were inside the regiment's home state the soldiers crowded out onto the platforms and stuck their heads out of the windows, eager to catch a glimpse of home. They danced about in their delight hugging and slapping each other and breaking out into snatches of the well-worn camp congs. They waved their hands to everyone in sight, gave rousing cheers for good old lowa and when the deafening noise of hundreds of steam whistles from the railroad yards and the factories of Council Bluffs struck their ears they only yelled,

"Will there be a crowd at the depot to meet us, Billy, and will they have a band?" "Oh, no: there won't be no crowd, I guess, Oh, no!

The first and second sections reached Albright at about 5 o'clock in the morning and were held there until after daylight. The Council Bluffs reception committee which had boarded the first section at Lincoln refrained from waking the boys until Albright was reached, but there they roused every man and pinned the badge of official welcome on him, After breakfast, which was served on the improvised dining cars accompanying each section, the men devoted themselves carefully to their toilets. Grips were ransacked for the last clean collar and when this was not to be found a white handkerchief was folded about the blue army shirt to represent one. Tousled heads were carefully combed and dusty uniforms industriously brushed. The boys knew that the state was waiting for them with open arms and they were anxious about their appearance on their last inspection. The men all looked much better physically than the Nebraskans did, having a better color and being for the most part heavier. This they attributed to the fact that they had had time in the rainy season to recover from the effects of the summer heat and had lost part of their tan. Their healthy bodies were the result of the convalescent dlet upon which the entire regiment was put on its arrival at San Francisco. The men were pleased with the way they had been treated and there was not a "kick" to be

"We have had a pretty good time ever since we left Manila," said one of them 'The Senator is a good boat; we had every thing we needed to live on, and when we got to San Francisco we had the best of everything. On the way from there we have been fed by a company which took the contract for the entire regiment, and we have lived just as though we had been in a first-class hotel. Nothing swell, of course but everything was good, and there was a plenty. It was served in a baggage car attached to each section."

The first section carried headquarters band and companies H. A. F and D. Besides Colonel Loper and his entire staff Adjutant General Byers and a party of the officers' wives were with this section. The second section carried Companies B, K, I and G. The third section was delayed and did not reach Council Bluffs in time to take part in side of Ogden, by the wreck of a train bearing the Forty-second infantry westward.

The wreck which delayed the first section compelled it to go back to Ogden and make a detour by the way of McCammon, which cost it five hours' time. General Byers made an effort to have it switched over to the Union Pacific so that it would not have to go by way of Denver, but the Union Pacific and Rock Island officials could not come to the necessary agreement, owing, it was said to the unwillingness of the Rock Island to give up its contract. Eight members of the regiment were left in the general hospital at the Presidio, in care of the Red Cross society. They are Frank A. Buker, Company A; William Mc Lean, E; Riley D. Stevens, G; Elmer Nar ver, D; Hugh M. Goss, M; Harry M. Woods A: Edward Woods, L: Ira Baird, E. None of these are in a serious condition, except Narver, who is suffering from paralysis re sulting from a bullet wound, and is considered to have but slight chance for re-

It was a source of great regret to the people of Council Bluffs that their company, L, was with the third section and did not arrive in time to get the benefit of the elaborate welcome prepared for them. But this did not prevent the entire city from turning out to honor those who had come and men who were comparative strangers in a strange city were received so kindly that they scarcely missed the loved ones still waiting for them in distant portions of the

There was a pandemonium at the depot Thousands of people had come in from the surrounding towns and from cities on the other edge of the state which had sent companies to fight in the Philippines, and they rushed to and fro in the crowd, searching eagerly among the blue figures for their own, but not knowing whether they had come or not. It was the same with the soldiers, but from their vantage ground on the trains they were able to pick out familiar faces in the crowds more easily and one after another they leaped from the train to clasp their relatives in their arms.

While families were finding their long lost sons, smothering them with caresses and exhibiting them proudly to admiring friends the parade was forming on Pearl street, and about 10 o'clock moved up town. The street was lined with cheering multitudes. Everyone was decorated with a button and ribbons and the vociferous cheers of the thousands of throats made the happy soldiers emile without ceasing.

RUSE TO CAPTURE VOTES FOR HOLCOMB

Appeal Purporting to Be Issued by a Maimed Railroad Man Circulates

Extensively-The Facts in the Case.

Last evening as the workingmen were quitting their day's work at the South Omaha packing houses and the Union Pacific shops and the smelter in Omaha they were handed a circular, addressed to "workingmen" and embellished with a half-tone cut of a man with an artificial leg lying alongside him on the ground, while the "stump" was shown up as a striking feature.

The circular purports to be a statement of Louis Olson, a former employe of the Burlington railroad who lost his leg by accident and who brought suit against the company for damages. He was given a verdict, but on appeal to the supreme court the verdict was set aside and a new trial ordered. Such is the story told by the author of the circular.

In the hope of arraying the workingmen lidates for governor to be voted for in Ohio against the republican candidate for the supreme bench the writer of the circular asserts that the decision was rendered by Judges Harrison, Norval and Post, republicans, and therefore he appeals to the workelection of Jones. LINCOLN, Nov. 6 .- (Special Telegram.) -Up to a late hour tonight the reports received indicate that the state will go republican tomorrow by a good, safe majority," said Secretary Harrison of the republican state central committee tonight. "Conservative estimates made by men who have been in all parts of the state place the majority at 5,000, although there are many who think it will reach as high as 15,000. There is a general air of confidence among our county and precinct committeemen and the prevailing enthusiasm will help to get out the full republican vote. "The fusion forces have put up a hard fight and have had an unlimited amount of money to spend, but there is no question that up to the present moment they are badly on the eve of election, sprung a number of ridiculous and despicable roorbacks, indicates that their campaign is in a desperate ondition." It is the opinion at the republican headquarters in this city that the appeal by the fusionists to the slum element and the other effort that is being made to befog the foreignborn voters on a number of false issues, will utterly fail. The tactics which have been employed by the popocratic crowd during the past few days show how low the

The fusionists concede the county to the republicans on the state ticket and all but two or three of the candidates for county offices. The most conservative estimate places Reese's majority in Lancaster county at 1,700, but others who understand the situation say that the republican candidate will get at least 2,000 more votes in Lancaster county than his opponent.
