The auditorium is being constructed from the plans of a similar building at Bloomfield, Ill. It will cost about $15,000, all of which was raised by popular subscription. It will have a seating capacity of over 5,000.

Probably the first meeting after the formal opening will be held by the State Teachers' association, which will be in session here for a week beginning January 1. In February the National Creamery Buttermakers' association will hold its annual convention in the finest church edifices in the state and only appointed at the Louisville meeting two mately $180,000,000. So you see that quesauditorium. This will be the largest convention over held in the city. Over 5,000 delegates are expected.

Plans for the formal opening have not been perfected, but those in charge will probably arrange for an affair similar to the opening of the Karsas City auditorium, but, of course, on a much smaller scale.

The action of the State Board of Educational Lands and Funds in refusing to pay more than par for general fund warrants was not a surprise as it was known some time ago that the reduction would be made. Until recently a 2 per cent premium was paid, but "as the condition of the money market has so changed that money is in demand at a higher rate of interest" hereafter no premium will be paid. The board decided to take this action some time ago, but it was not announced to the public until yesterday.
