(Copyright, 1899, by Press Publishing Co.) DURBAN, Natal, Nov. 13, 10:30 p. m .-(New York World Cablegram-Special Telegram.)-An unconfirmed rumor is current here that General Joubert, the commanderin-chief of the Boer forces, was killed Friday at Ladysmith.

The story as told is that the British naval guns suddenly opened fire on a position where the Boers had mounted siege guns and that General Joubert, who was standing near the artillery, was struck with a fragment of a shell at the second shot, the wound being so severe that he afterwards died. It is also said that, at a Boer council of war, the other generals were anxious to remove the army to some other point, but General Joubert desired to capture Lady-General James Meyer is said to have gone STUART. to Pretoria, being ill.

ESTCOURT, Nov. 13, 4:35 p. m .- (New York World Cablegram-Special Telegram.) -(Delayed.)-About 500 Boers have arrived at Chieveley station. They blew up the railway line there with dynamite and retired on seeing a mounted infantry patrol and other patrolling bodies. The Boers are reported today to be south of the Tugela river, which runs through and the utmost vigilance is maintained, but general confidence prevails that in the grassy (open) country any Dutch attack can be repulsed.

The situation is much clearer throughout Further efforts to seize Ladysmith failed, but the Boer heliograph acknowledged them, Baying "Will be with you tomorrow." The British reply was much shorter.

WINSTON CHURCHILL. At Mercy of the Boers.

DURBAN, Nov. 15, 10:35 a. m .- The armpred train, which is already reported as wrecked and captured, arrived at Chieveley safely, only a few Boers having been seen there. It started back and was thrown from the trac't two miles from that station by an phstructica. The front car was turned over, the enemy opening a hot fire at the same time from a kopje with a Maxim and two nine-pounders. They got the range accurately, hitting the cars and locomotive, but flid no damage to the vital parts of the latter. The naval gun attached fired thrice,

MANY PATHETIC SCENES ARE ENACTED

Under the Intelligent Direction of the Commander All Are Taken Ashore Without Mishap, but Lose Their Belongings.

Copyright, 1899, by Press Publishing Co.) LONDON, Nov. 15.—(New York World Cablegram—Special Telegram.)—Some thrilling narratives were told today of the loss of the Patria to the World's correspondent at Dover, all of which go to show that Commander Frohlich and his crew acted with remarkable bravery and coolness.

Among the passengers was L. Duplace, German consul at Porto Rico, who was traveling to Germany accompanied by his wife. The shock had such a serious effect that he died at the Harp hotel. The first class passengers, almost without exception, lost everything except what they stood up in. Some were without jackets and bats and one old woman, who suffered very much from her trying experiences, was shoeless. S. T. Cowden of Laughlin, N. J., on his way to Germany to study for a professorship, said: "The first intimation of there being anything wrong was conveyed to the passengers about 6 o'clock yesterday morning when they were called up. I noticed smoke proceeding from the direction of the engine room amidships, It was still hoped that the fire might not be of a very serious character and the captain thought he might be able to reach Hamburg. At about 9 o'clock at night the fire was gaining rapidly on the ship and emoke was ascending in dense black volumes. The fire appeared to have originated could see flames issuing from the hold. The iron deck and sides became intensely hot. The vessel was heavily laden, drawing the crew was magnificent all through."

Compliments for the Crew.

Hugo La Chenicht of San Francisco, speaking of the conduct of the crew, said: "I never saw a braver lot of men. Captain Frohlich earned our warmest gratitude. He never left the bridge. Both he and the officers endeavored to cheer up the passengers. When I last saw the captain he was standing on the bridge, enveloped in smoke, which rolled along the vessel in thick clouds, enough to suffocate us. In the midst of these exciting circumstances I heard him call for his pipe. Owing to the flames and smoke we were told we had better leave the ship. The boats were lowered at 11 o'clock. None were allowed to get into the boats without permission from the captain or officers. The order went forth from the captain that the and children should go first. This order was obeyed to the letter. Not a single attempt was made to contravene it. Owing to this order some terribly pathetic scenes were witnessed as men parted from their wives and children. A touching scene was witnessed as the fire continued to gain upon the ship and the boats were about to leave-some Polish passengers, men and women, going down on their knees, praying and crying. Fortunately the sea was not very rough. Most of the passengers, acting under the noble example of the captain and officers, controlled their feelings, but the scene was one of intense excitement. One poor woman had three little children clinging to her and it was with the utmost difficulty that she could be persuaded that her

Ernest Unk of Third avenue, New York, said: "Many of us tried to get our trunks and belongings, but found it utterly impossible owing to the volumes of smoke that filled every part of the ship. Twenty-four hours previous to the outbreak of the fire the officers suspected there was fire in the ship's hold, but nothing was said to the passengers, as the captain hoped to get to Hamburg before the fire assumed serious dimensions. The Patria was transporting from America sixteen valuable race horses in the forepart of the ship. All were suffocated and burned to death They were splendid creatures. The greatest regret was felt on board, but nothing could be done to rescue them. The cause of the fire was unknown, but it is supposed that it originated from overheating in the hold." Charles Bramm, cabin passenger from New York, said: "There were altogether eighteen it will be taken back to Omaha, where a lifeboats on the Patria, of which seven were launched, in each case with twenty-eight passengers, the only exception being the boat I was in. Two crews were sent in charge. There were sixteen passengers in our boat, all men. We got away from the ship before the eallors got into the boat. for the people to get under."

DOVER, Eng., Nov. 16 .- There seems to be a general complaint among the passengers of the Hamburg-American line steamer Patria, Captain Frohlich, which caught fire off this port yesterday while on its way from New York for Hamburg, that they were kept in ignorance of the outbreak of the fire for about five hours. The passengers, who were landed here, assert that if they had been notified in time all their baggage could have been saved. A saloon passenger says "The passengers were not informed of the fire until 11 o'clock Wednesday morning and there is good reason to believe that the officers knew of the outbreak of the fire at 6 o'clock in the morning. I was standing on deck, saw smoke curling up behind the
