Jefferson De Angells, his jolly Musketeers and pretty girls made merry at Boyd's theater Friday night, much to the edification and enjoyment of an audience larger than lynotype machinists, and protesting against like to have a talk with him. Hamilton any that has sat in the theater during the any change in the present eight-hour cal- evidently took a different view of the mat- week. Last season Mr. De Angelis and his company visited Omaha, but, much to the disappointment of theater-goers, the engagement was for one night only. At that time the impression made by both the company and opera was a most favorable one and it was renewed again last night. "The Jolly Musketeers" is one of the few comic operas possessing brilliant music-for at times it is really brilliant-as well as the necessary ele ments of merit and mirth-provoking fun There are any number of catchy musical numbers in it, including soles, trios, quartets and ensembles and, while someone is not singing. De Angelis or his partner in > of the stage and keep the audience in an uproar of laughter. There are few, if any, comedians on the comic opera stage that are funnier than De Angelis and those even in his class can be counted upon the fingers of one hand. He is thoroughly original and quite inimitable, his nether extremities play an important part in his fun making and one cannot even help Compared with the assessed figures for | wishing that he had more dancing to do in the piece than he does. The part of Henri, the Count de Beaupret, fits his peculiar style of comedy work to a nicety and, as the man irresistible to all women, he is given unlimited opportunities to create laughter. Harry Macdonough is another comedian, clever in deed, and he shares the honors with De Angelis. The company, although somewhat changed, is in many respects better than it was last year. The chorus is stronger and a well nigh perfect one. In place of Van Rasseler Wheeler, Rubert Wilke assumes the leading male singing role and, while he is hardly the handsome fellow that his predecessor was, he makes up in voice what

1899 is lacking in looks. Mr. Wilke is a clever actor as well as musician. Grace Van Studdiford replaces Bertha season. She has a well pitched soprano voice and sings and acts the role admirably. Quite the hit of the performance is dainty little Maud Hollins as Verve. She possesses a sweet voice, not strong, but suited to her part: a pleasing stage presence and a personality which won her audience completely Friday evening. To her "Kiss Song" in the second act she was compelled to respond to a half dozen encores. For her, one might venture a prediction of future greatness as

Among the catchy vocal numbers of the opera are Mr. De Angelis' "Women, Lovely Women" and "Just to Pass the Time Away"; his and Mr. Macdenough's "Sweet Oblivion Drink" and "Love, Sweet Love"; Miss Van Studdiford's "Love for a Day" and "The Wishing Well"; the quartette "Man, Wicked Man"; Mr. Wilke's "Friende" and "The King's Own Musketeers"; the opening chorus of the flower girls and the ensemble finale to Act I.
