The letter of a local society girl to a friend who has become popular here during her frequent visite is given below, it being very expressive of the social life during the last week:

"OMAHA, Saturday, Nov. 23 .- Eleanor Dear: It has just struck midnight and, with | terest. a devotion almost manlike, I write you the usual periodic budget in this moment of relaxation after the last affair of the week. It is too bad you had to miss this jolly week, but never mind, I shall keep 'him' safe and sound till your return-at least. Really, he looks uncommonly lonesome; goes around like a procession headed for the cemetery or some place quite as 'grave.'

"But let me tell you of the gay times we have had this week. To begin with, you must know it has been the most whirly week of all. Really, I have scarcely had time to 'pomp' my hair and change gowns between acts. There was Mr. and Mrs. Kilpatrick's supper Monday night, which was a progress sive one, by the way-that is, you ate salada at one table and then sailed off to another for the next course, and so on till the whole menu had been served. It made things very congenial, only I'd rather have had more time at the ice cream table than at the salad board. When I get rich enough to build a marble palace-or, rather, when Jack does-I shall have progressive dinners, too, but each table will be served with ice creamthe difference will be in the flavors.

"We missed you, too, at Gertrude Kountze's tea Tuesday afternoon. You know it rained, and rained; just the wo.st sort of a day, but that only made the interior of Forest Hill the more attractive, and then, of course, the prospect of a new mistress in the home added a romantic flavor. In fact, the whole atmosphere has exuded matrimony lately until every girl bas been affected by it, and in their Tuesday state of mind any man could only have led up to the subject at his own rick. And while we are on the subject, let me tell you a solemn secret. It happened at the Towle dancing party Thursday night. "You really should have seen how charming all the girls looked at Eva Kennard's tea this evening. You know it is so much more pleasant to have the hours in the evening when the young men can drop in. It adds variety, at least. Miss Clayton, for whom the reception was given, is the daughter of Hon. Powell Clayton, United States minister to Mexico. She is a delightful girl-one of that winsome kind that is always popular.

"Then the bewildering number of dinners! There isn't much use to keep house any more, for truly there was a dinner every night this week, not to mention the luncheons and teas. And that's what makes society girls grow old. What a pity it is unconventional to serve grape-nuts.

"And now I must tell you the best joke of the season. A certain tall, Gibson man, with dark hair and large gray eyes, with a serious, rather mysterious air; one of those blase young men who stand apart with folded arms and a far-away gaze-Oh, you know who I mean, he was suddenly stricken with a certain visiting girl, a beauty, too, with the richest coloring, and 'kissed gold by the sun.'
