GOLD IS KING IN NOME

Farway Region Where Yellow Dust is Measured in Boxes and Barrels.

WHERE APPETITE IS A DECIDED HANDICAP

Some Surprising Prevailing Prices in the New and Wonderful Gold Camp on the Frozen Shores of Bering Sea.

Acquaintances of William Snyder, the former Harney street carriage maker, who left Omaha for the Klondike about a year and a half ago, will be interested in knowing that his particular friend, John Driscoll, has just received another letter from him, dated Cape Nome, Alaska, October 28. A former letter published in The Bee contained the information that he had cleaned up over $5,000 at Dawson in manufacturing mining rockers, and with his capital thus acquired had gone on northwest to Cape Nome, on the shore of Bering sea, about 120 miles from the southern boundary of Siberia. In his most recent letter Mr. Snyder congratulates himself on being located in the richest mining camp in the world and surrounded by very many favorable chances of getting rich easily. At the time of writing he was building himself a new house on the principal business street of the city and expected to move into it early in November. "When you come," he writes Mr. Driscoll, "you will locate in my house on Snake River beach, just at the mouth of Snake river, where it empties into Bering sea. From my house I can overlook the sea and the ships going in and coming out. I have been to Cape Princess of Wales and returned, and will go back again this winter on the ice. The weather on the coast is much warmer than in the interior. It snows some every day now, and we will soon be isolated from the outside. Only one ship is here now, the Alpha, and she carries the only one for this year."

So glowing have been the reports of the prospects for accumulating wealth in this faraway district of Arctic rigors of climate that Mr. Driscoll has decided to accept Snyder's invitation and join in his quest for gold. Accompanied by his son, Fred Driscoll, Fred Marty and a few others, he will go north early next summer.

While Mr. Snyder's letter is brief, it enclosed two copies of newspapers from Nome which attest the cosmopolitan proclivities of the modern publisher in seeking out the remotest corners of the earth to carry forward the dissemination of knowledge and civilization. From their perusal one is led inevitably to the conclusion that the moving inspiration which beckons the wanderers to this faraway land away from the advantages of temperate lands and the comforts of home, prevails in every walk of life. It is the mania for money getting, the relentless greed for gold. Throughout the length and breadth of the columns one reads but of money and gold.

Each paper is a four-column, four-page paper, containing entire not nearly so much reading matter as one page of The Bee. Each is issued weekly, and yet the subscription rate is $24 a year, $2 a month or 50 cents a single copy. Each devotes about three columns out of twelve to advertisements of saloons and restaurants, with a few lawyer's cards. Neither mentions partisan politics. One, which bears the stamp of stability and conservatism that is an attribute of age, has reached a longevity of four weeks. It is called the Nome News and is edited by J. F. A. Strong. The other, called the Nome Gold Digger, is an initial number, and bears the name of Cassius M. Cue as editor and proprietor.

The latter is evidently imbued with the spirit of its youth, for it somewhat boastfully invites its admirers to send it abroad as it contains "the first authentic account of the mines." Whether or not it be the first authentic account, it is certainly an interesting recital. In the discussion of one of the mining districts, this paper says:

Aurous Sands.
"This is certainly, temperate speaking, one of the richest gold districts that has ever been known. There are claims on the creeks about Nome that will surprise the whole world. These mines begin about five miles northwest of town and are situated on Snow, Anvil, Glacier, Dexter, Buster and other creeks and gulches. Snow gulch, which is enormously rich, has only four claims upon it. Nos. 1, 2 and 3 are owned by the Pioneer Mining company, and No. 4 by Charles D. Lane of San Francisco, who bought it for $25,000. Nuggets have been found on these claims worth $150 each. There has been taken out of Snow gulch during the last summer between $300,000 and $400,000. The gulch has a length of but one mile, and each of the four claims on it is 1,320 feet long.
Of the eighteen claims on Anvil creek, the paper says, one has been sold to Charles D. Lane for $75,000. On another claim nuggets have been found worth $300 and $400. It is only four or five feet below the ground pays up to $32 a pan. It pays over the whole claim, and clean-ups have yielded from $15,000 to $14,000. During the summer the claim turned out $115,000. On still another claim in the Anvil creek district W. H. Price, its owner, has cleaned up $192,000.

The Charles D. Lane mentioned by this paper is known to many politicians hereabouts. He was a member of the free silver republican national convention at St. Louis in 1896 and is the man who settled all the bills. Subsequently he visited at Lincoln during the Bryan campaign and is supposed to have put considerable money into the national campaign fund. Although he was an ardent free silverite he was in fact engaged almost exclusively in gold mining. The Gold Digger predicts that his properties in the Anvil creek district will clear up for him $1,000,000. For three of the claims he holds he paid $185,000. He owns forty or fifty claims altogether in the two districts named above. The Gold Digger predicts that during the coming summer the Nome river district will clean up $10,000,000. Anvil, Snow and Dexter creeks yielded about $1,000,000 during the last summer and the beach mines $1,500,000.

"During the last summer," says the paper, "about 200 men worked on Snow gulch and Glacier creek, and 250 on Anvil. On Dexter only rocking was done. The gold will come out of these early next spring. Probably 500 men worked on the creeks and 2,000 men on the beach mines."

Nome has a mayor, T. D. Cashel, who writes an article for the initial number of the Gold Digger. In it he says:
"When I first came to Nome on June 27 from Dawson some men were working on the beach to see what they could get out of it. They worked quietly at first, but pretty soon the richest got out. Business men quit their business in town and went to the beach to work. The whole shore became an attraction."

"I don't like to theorize as to where the gold comes from, but the gold is nearly always coarser near the shore than at the edge of the tundra, giving the impression that it comes out of the sea, because the finest particles are found deposited at the furthest point from the surf action. Within a radius of two miles on the beach, about August 15, I counted personally 280 rockers. There were at least two men to each and away beyond these rockers, below the Indian village for seven or eight miles, was an almost continuous line of men. Taking as a conservative average, I should think 2,500 men were working on the beach between the mouth of Snake river and Cripple river. I judge very few of them made less than $10 a day and the average was at least an ounce a day, or $16. I know personally two men who took out $13,000 between July 15 and October 1, and there were others that I know in a short space of time took out lots of gold. J. W. Lean, a San Francisco newspaper man, took out $7,000 in thirty days and left the country. I made myself, under unfavorable circumstances, $100 a day for a time. The appliances were crude and the men were inexperienced. But after the introduction of copper and silver plate better results were obtained. I estimate that an average of 5,000 men were working on the beach and they made $1,500 each. This would bring the product up to $2,000,000, and I believe that at the least the product was from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000. They worked nearly thirteen miles of this beach."

Confusing Medley of Big Figures.

But it is not alone in the mines that big figures prevail. They form the basis of every transaction in Nome, whether public or private. One of the papers sent by Snyder carries a report of a meeting of the municipal council for the purpose of reducing the salaries of the city's six patrolmen comprising the city police force to a paltry $150 a month. Although such action was taken, it was explained that the reduction was merely temporary. This was doubtless to disarm opposition, for there was opposition, and it is related that one constable named Donovan declared that a man could not live on $150 a month when he had to pay $2 a meal. He engaged in a controversy with another constable named Dam in relation to the adequacy of the proposed salary.

"Politeness," said Donovan, "get $125 a month outside, besides a rake-off, which they don't get here."
"Dam—Don't they?"
"Donovan—No. I was a policeman once for two weeks and I didn't get any."
"Dam—You weren't on your job."
At the same meeting, relates the paper, Dr. Wirt of the hospital wanted assurance from the council that he should have all city patients at $5 each per day. Another item in the same issue showed that at Dr. Wirt's hospital there were twenty-five patients, but as the latter are cared for at reduced rates, it was evident that Dr. Wirt's hospital was doing a business of at least $125 a day. Meantime, at a meeting within the week, private citizens had subscribed to pay sums aggregating $150 a month for the support of the hospital, and a lot of trained nurses had arrived to tend their services.

The Gold Digger gives an interesting table of ruling prices in Nome that easily puts in the shade any of the fanciful stories by pioneers in any of the western mining camps, where prices have always hitherto seemed fabulous. "These prices," says Gold Digger, "may seem extraordinary to residents of the Pacific coast and the east, but here most of them do not excite any comment. The truth is that the beach mines have, during the summer, produced so much gold to the workers here that everybody has had money which was endowed with the slightest ambition to get along. It is only lately, however, that flour, lumber and coal have reached the phenomenal figures now ruling. Some of the present prices are: Beef, per pound, 15c; Wood, per cord, $35.00; 50c; Butter, per hundredweight, 19c; Canned milk, per can, 7c; Canned meat, per can, about 7c; Maple syrup, per gallon, 4.00; Potatoes, per hundredweight, 10.00; 15.00; Onions, per hundredweight, 10.00; 15.00; Tomatoes, per can, 7c; Sweet potatoes, per can, 7c; Sugar, per can, 7c; Starch, per can, 7c; Lumber, per 1,000 feet, 20.00. Here are some of the ruling restaurant prices: Porterhouse steak, $2.50; Tenderloin steak, 2.50; Plain steak, 1.50.

Sores & Ulcers

Capt. J. H. Moberly, of Lawrenceburg, Ky., says: "For years I suffered intensely from a running sore on my leg, caused by a wound received in the army. I was treated by a number of doctors, and took many blood medicines, without the slightest benefit. S. S. S. was recommended, and the first bottle produced a great improvement. The poison was forced out, and the sore healed up completely."
